Detroit fireworks shootings: Police arrested one man and were searching for a second suspect after nine people were shot and injured during a fireworks show in downtown Detroit.

Police said the shootings apparently followed an argument, and innocent people were caught in the crossfire. Five victims remained hospitalized Friday, including one who was in critical condition.

Daron T. Caldwell, 32, of Detroit, was charged with assault with intent to murder, use of a firearm in a felony and possession of a firearm by a felon.

Caldwell pleaded innocent at his arraignment Friday.

Police said they think Caldwell was the lone shooter, but they were also seeking 24-year-old Gary Williams.

Mad cow disease: Consumers of U.S. beef need not be alarmed after an animal tested positive in a preliminary screening for mad cow disease because it never entered the food chain, agriculture officials

The Agriculture Department labeled the result "inconclusive" for the brain-wasting disease, pending further tests. The carcass was being sent to the USDA National Veterinary Laboratory in Ames, Iowa, with results expected in four to seven days.

"No matter how the confirmatory testing comes back, USDA remains confident in the safety of the U.S. beef supply," John Clifford, deputy administrator of USDA veterinary services, said in announcing the finding late Friday. "This animal did not enter the human food chain or feed chain."

Mars rovers: NASA's Mars rovers, challenged by tough terrain and age, are still making discoveries, including a new find of a mineral usually formed in water, scientists said Friday.

The Spirit rover found hematite in a rock at the Columbia Hills after a trek across the plains of the Gusev Crater region, where it previously had seen geologic evidence of only limited past moisture.

Spirit's twin, Opportunity, found hematite soon after landing on the other side of the planet, leading scientists to believe that area was once drenched in water, and conditions there could have been suitable for life.

LAPD beating: A Los Angeles police officer caught on videotape pummeling a suppected car thief with a flashlight said bedlivered the blows because another officer warned that the man was carrying a gun the Los Angeles Times reported Saturday.

John J. Hatfield told investigators that another officer attempting to handcuff 36-year-old Stanley Miller after a car chase Wednesday felt a metal object in Miller's pants, the newspaper said, citing anonymous sources.

Hatfield tried to subdue Miller by kicking him and striking him 11 times with a metal flashlight. The object mistaken for a gun was later revealed to be wire cutters in Miller's right front pants pocket.

Hatfield's account was corroborated by two other officers at the scene, the Times reported.

Patrols for illegal immigrants: The Border Patrol launched an unmanned drone Friday that uses thermal and night-vision equipment to help agents spot illegal immigrants trying to cross the desert into the United States.

The stepped-up surveillance is part of a mission that officials hope will stem the tide of illegal immigrants that has made Arizona the busiest illegal entry point along the Yee benefit: James Yee, left, stands with his father, Joseph Yee, at a dinner organized by the East Coast "Justice for James Yee Ad Hoc Committee" held at New York's Chinatown on Friday to raise funds to cover his legal fees. Accused of espionage at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where he served as a Muslim chaplain, Yee was placed under arrest and imprisoned for 76 days. Eight months later, the military's charges against Yee have been dropped. New York City Council members and dinner attendees demanded the U.S. government begin an immediate inquiry into the handling of the Yee case.

The Department of Homeland Security, which is funding the program, also plans to test the drones in Northern states, over the Great Lakes and in Puerto Rico, said Robert Smith, head of the Customs and Border Protection's unmanned aerial drone program.

Jailed CIA contractor: A federal judge has ordered former CIA contractor David Passaro to remain jailed until his assault trial after prosecutors said witnesses would testify Passaro beat an Afghan detainee so badly he begged to be shot.

Following a detention hearing Friday in North Carolina, U.S. Magistrate Judge William Webb connected a 1990 assault by Passaro when he was a Connecticut police officer and the alleged beating of Abdul Wali in an Afghanistan prison. Northern Ireland power-sharing: The prime ministers of Britain and Ireland said Friday they expect Northern Ireland's divided parties to decide by September whether they want to resume power-sharing.

Tony Blair of Britain and Bertie Ahern of Ireland, speaking jointly after meeting delegations from five Northern Ireland parties, said a new round of Belfast talks in September would determine whether a Catholic-Protestant administration could be revived.

If not, Blair warned, the British territory's would-be lawmakers could lose their posts and salaries.

Beheaded South Korean: The body of a South Korean hostage beheaded in Iraq returned to his hometown Saturday, his coffin draped in the national flag and escorted by a police honor guard in white dress uniforms. Sobbing mourners watched as the remains were transferred from a South Korean military transport plane to an awaiting hearse. The body was then taken to a local hospital where a memorial alter was set up for the public to pay respects.

Kim Sun-il, a 33-year-old worker at a company supplying the U.S. military, was killed by militants on Tuesday after the South Korean government refused to bow to their demand that it stop its troop deployment

Violence in Kashmir: Suspected Islamic real-els raided a village Saturday in Indireal-controlled Kashmir and shot to death 12 Muslims while they slept, police said, a day before talks between India and Pakistan on easing tensions in the Himalayan region.

A woman and a 3-year-old were among the dead in the village of Surankot, police said, but most of those killed were members of a military-trained local village security force often targeted for helping government forces.

Elsewhere, some 50 men and women were trapped inside a mosque for two hours during a gunfight between security forces and suspected Islamic militants in Litter village, 40 miles south of Srinagar, the summer capital of India's Jammu-Kashmir state.

They were freed after the militants shifted to an adjoining building, a police official said on condition of anonymity. The gunbattle continued.

Terrorist groups list: Philippines Foreign Minister Delia Albert said the government will not help Communist rebels get off lists of terrorist groups in the United States and the European Union.

The government will look at other issues raised by the rebled during the past week's peace talks in Norway, including the release of political prisoners and social and economic development projects, "but the issue on the terrorist list is not negotiable," she said Friday.

Communist rebels expressed disappointment Friday with the peace talks with Philippine government envoys in Oslo, but said they remain committed to solving the 35-year conflict.

Troops trade war faces for poker faces

Card games give servicemembers chance to relax, talk trash downrange

By JESSICA INIGO

CAMP VICTORY NORTH, Iraq
— Five sets of cold, blank eyes stare out of deadpan faces prepared to give a Baghdad beatdown.

These guys are aggressive. They're ready for war. Nothing would make them feel better than some rolled-up aces over kings.

This battle is called No-Limit Texas Hold 'Em, and the 'rounders," or players, are medical troops deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Every couple of weeks, troops with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Cavalry Division's surgeon section in Baghdad experience this kind of minidrama, mimicking scenes of televised Texas No-Limit Hold 'Em tournament coverage on DVD.

Capt. David "KGZ" Zimmerman, medical operations officer for the 1st Cavalry Division, knows all the angles. The key to no-limit is to play the man, not the cards.

When the KGZ gets in poker mode, he pulls out all the stops. He has a baseball cap pulled down low and some black wraparound shades he'll wear in the pitch of night to ensure no one plays him.

The Cav guys call Hold 'Em the Cadillac of poker.

"It's a game that takes 30 seconds to learn and lifetime to master," said Lt. Col. Roberto "Smooth Operator" Nang, the division surgeon, whose tactic is to up the ante just to test the waters.

They started playing downrange after the KCZ wrote to the World Poker Tour and some Las Vegas casinos. Simple letters got the captain 400 decks of cards donated to the troops from the MGM Grand and Aladdin casinos, five free sets of the first season of the World Poker Tour, and a box of casino chips from www.oldvegas chips.com.

Across a cheap white plastic table, the KGZ begins to deal. Just behind the troops, scenes of Vegas and the Bellagio dance across a television screen.

If it wasn't for the missing green felt tables and tinkling of ice cubes, the KGZ's air-conditioned

Almost forgetting the earlier banter of trash talkin', the game starts quietly as everyone peeks at their cards. These high rollers try to make the game as real as possible when they get the chance to play. The stakes are high.

Though gambling is not authorized, per Army regulation, what these rounders win is so much beter bragging rights, the honor of being called "Johnny Chan," a two-time World Series of Poker champion, including a framed mug of the legend to keep until the next game, and exclusion from having to buy the next round of refreshments and snacks.

More stories on the poker phenomenon on Pages 4-6

Usually the medical crew plays twice a month, depending on work-load, according to Maj. Jim "Diamond Jim" Kelley, chief of medical plans and operations.

Diamond Jim said when the time is finally right to get the game going, the trash talkin' begins around noon.

"The colonel [Smooth Operator] is a good poker player in his own right," Diamond Jim offered, "but he's also got one of the fastest records for being asked to leave the table. He's lost all his chips in just two hands."

Quickly the banter progresses throughout the day until everyone gets off work.

The winner of the last game hosts the evening's event in his trailer. This time's winner is a laid-back guy named Sgt. Ist Class Steven "Sgt. Harley" Plante, the medical intelligence noncommissioned officer in charge.

He's not a trash talker, but more of a one-liner, throwing in jabs when necessary, just to keep his competitors in check.

"These three guys," Harley said, pointing to the KGZ, Smooth Operator and Diamond Jim, "are the biggest trash talkers. Sometimes you have to stand on a chair, it get so deep in here."

Sgt. Harley said the night he won several weeks ago was a typical poker night in the hooch, just struggling along, but then his luck changed and he took it all. He's planning on hosting the next go round sometime in the next two

His competitors said all he's planning on doing is losing.

All but one player, Sgt. 1st Class Buddy "Die Hard" Beavers, has had the opportunity to be Johnny Chan. Die Hard, medical operation noncommissioned officer in charge, blames it on not being able to attend as many games as he would like.

The truth is, no one in the medical unit plays as much as they would like.

"There are no weekends, no hours, per se," Diamond Jim said. He explained that in their section, they work around the clock and are always on call.

With the harrowing work schedule, Smooth Operator said from a medical standpoint it actually makes sense to play cards.

"Number one, it's important not to be isolated, lonely or depressed out here. By coming together we share in camaraderie," as Smooth Operator. "Number two, in terms of an outlet for stress and other relief, playing games or cards, from a morale and welfare point of view, is very therapeutic." Empli legis to lice at:

Card games a great way to kill time aboard ship

By JASON CHUDY Stars and Stripes

NAPLES Italy - Odds are that if you work on a ship, you can find a card game.

Playing cards, according to Petty Officer 1st Class Anthony Jackson of the Fleet Air Mediter ranean staff, is as popular in the Navy as it is back in the United

"On a ship, especially out at sea, there's a limit at what you can do [with free time]," he said. "Gambling on a ship is not allowed, but it does happen."

Cards are played "anywhere you can set up a table," Jackson said. "[Sailors] know who to talk to on the 'boat

"When they don't like what's on [the shipboard TV station], they go and play cards or dominoes," said Petty Officer 1st Class Richard Lynden, NSA Naples' first lieutenant. "In the evening, you'd just get off of work and play cards to pass the time."

Most of the games on the ships are either noker or snades said Lynden, who has spent 10 of his 18 Navy years on ships.

"Cards were fairly important to morale," he said.

Jackson said there are a few reasons why card games are important aboard ship. Space, he said, is limited and a deck of cards fits anywhere. Then, there are free cards

"The casinos used to send us cards on a regular basis." he said. Jackson said he preferred to play the card game "Tonk" while on his two ships, the destroyer USS Cunningham and submarine tender USS Simon Lake.

"You need to know who you're playing with," he said. "When I used to do it a lot, we used to take the new guys and set them up in the beginning.

"It was a steady income," he id. "You could make two or three grand in two or three

Many sailors would rather go out for a night on the town, or trav-el, rather than stay holed up in a barracks room or apartment for a card game.

But it was Civil War soldiers who caused a dramatic explosion in the popularity of poker, when tens of thousands of soldiers played the game in barracks across the North and South.

The Civil War also brought about games such as stud poker, the "draw" variant, and hands such as the straight.

When the war was over, the game went home with them, most notably traveling northward with Union soldiers return-ing from the Battle of Vicksburg, Lipscomb said.

Most informal poker gatherings are held using "dealer's choice": the deal rotates among players, with the dealer picking the game All games have variants, and it's the dealer's choice as to which

7-Card Stud

Probably the best-known of all poker games, and the one with the most variations. Each player is dealt seven cards of their own: often two down, then four up, and a final card down. Played with up to 7 players. Variations include:

Baseball

Each player is dealt seven cards: two down, four up, and a final card down. Threes and nines are wild, and often, a four will earn the player an extra card, perhaps for a small price.

Midnight Baseball

cards are face-down and no one can look at their cards. Players turn up their cards in turn, besting the previous high hand and betting as they go. Wild cards are the same as regular Baseball.

Follow the Queen

Two cards down, four up, last one down. This time, the queen is wild (be it up or down, as a "hole card") and whatever follows an "up" queen is also wild. What makes it interesting is that if another queen is turned up, the card that follows it becomes the new wild card, potentially changing hands drastically. Too many variants to list. Mexican Sweat

After each player has seven, three others of its rank are wild) and a "kill" card — others getting 5-Card Stud

Similar to 7-Card Stud. The obvious difference is that each player receives five cards. The first is dealt face down with the four following cards dealt face up. One variant is having the last card dealt face-down.

Texas Hold 'Em

Favored by the big guns and the one used in the popular TV shows. Each player gets two cards down, decides whether they'll stay in, and bets. The "flop" turns up three community cards. Players bet, as they do when they see the fourth and fifth cards turned up. Each player must make their hand with their two hole cards and three of the community cards.

high-stakes poker and soon started the "World Poker Tour" and created a sensation on, of all things, The Travel Channel.

He brought his presentation skills to the table, in-stalling "lipstick" cameras at each player's seat so the viewing audience could see the "hole cards," or the cards dealt face-down that only that particular player can see.

That changed the whole experience, said professional player Annie Duke

"Without seeing the hole card, it's just a bunch of stone-faced people sitting around a table. But with the lipstick camera, it becomes very exciting and fun to watch.

Poker also is exciting, Lipscomb found, because "it's the perfect blend of luck and skill."

No glitz or glamour, but plenty of charm at Western casino

BY ADAM GOLDMAN The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — On a stretch of despair that tourists seldom see, the Western Hotel-Casino stands out as a beacon for the broke and nearly broken.

With their crumpled dollars and gloomy gait, they stumble in off Fremont Street through the wide, doorless entrance, beck-oned by the sounds of penny slot machines and cheap table games. The Western is a poor man's dream, a downtown casino where sad Las Vegas cliches collide. "This is the underbelly of Vegas," said 28-year-old Byron Hilton, who was playing $2 blackjack on a recent Friday night.

"This is not the Strip."

The boxy structure is planted among a slew of low-income houses and budget motels — the Downtowner, the Uptown, and the incongruous Lucky. The Western feeds from one of the city's bleakest Zip codes, stained by high powerty and unemployment rates.

Inside they gamble, pouring nickels and quarters down the throats of always hungry machines.

The roulette table sees an occasional gambler, but the blackjack tables — marred by cigarette burns and beer stains — get plenty of action at minimum $1, $2 and $5 bets.

"You can't win no money here," said 38-year-old Ace, who has frequented the Western since 1995, the same year he said he "pulled a job" in Reno, and had to get out of town "real quick."

In the early morning weekend hours, the smoke hangs in the air like a veil, a giant gray cloud that wraps itself around the customers. The booze is working its sleepy magic.

Some people are slumped over, passed out. Rousted, they are politely, gently made to leave.

Others, thumbing their last casino chip and in need of one more drink, look to Betty Williams. Williams has walked the worn floors as a cocktail waitress for 31 years. She's spent the past 15 of those working the smoky grave-yard shift.

She has logged the most time at the Western, except for an algae-colored bingo machine that has been pumping out balls since the casino opened in January 1971.

The 54-year-old Williams, who's originally from Tallulah, La., loves the graveyard shift and loves the Western. The teetotaler has never been married and doesn't have bad days.

In a city that exploits weakness and promotes vice, Williams has never buckled. Known to her loyal customers as Miss Betty, she doesn't blink.

"I don't let nothin' bother me," Williams said, her soft Southern drawl draping her words.

"I've seen all types in the Western, down from the poor to the rich," she said. "You got to treat them all the same. I laugh with ev-

Williams does more than tote complimentary cans of Budweiser and Tecate. She delivers hope.

"I try to lift their spirits when they don't have anything. A lot of people like to come talk to me because I'm a good listener."

Her common refrain: "You gotta get off the drugs, clean yourself up and look for a job and save your money."

Waitress Betty Williams accepts a tip Wednesday during the graveyard shift at the Western Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas. Williams is a 31-year veteran of the casino.

were the latest in a wave of violence in the days leading to the transfer of sovereignty on Wednesday. Most of the attacks have been directed at the interim Iragi government's security forces - the foundation of its power. American soldiers also were targeted. The military said a U.S. soldier died of wounds suffered in a coordinated attack Saturday on a patrol in central Baghdad.

In the Baqouba attacks, insurgents fired rocket-propelled grenades at the offices of the Supreme Council of the Islamic Revolution in Iraq, said party member Maitham Ibrahim. Three narty members died and two were injured, hospital officials

Gunmen also stormed the offices of interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi's political party, the Iraq National Accord, setting off an explosion before fleeing, witnesses

Both parties hold important posts in the interim government due to assume sovereignty on Wednesday. The supreme council promotes the interests of the country's Shiite majority, which has long struggled with the influential Sunni Muslim minority for political power and had cooperat-ed with U.S. forces during a showdown last spring with Shiite ex-tremists led by radical cleric Muqtada al-Sadr

In Baghdad, Iraq's defense minister, Hazem Shaalan, warned Friday of a "showdown" with insurgents, and officials repeated warnings that the new government may impose some form of martial law in selected areas of the country if order cannot be restored.

Much of the violence has been blamed on a movement led by Jordanian-born extremist Musab al-Zargawi, who U.S. officials believe is operating from Falluiah, which emerged as a virtual green zone for insurgents after U.S. Marines gave up their siege of the city in April having failed to rout rebels there.

U.S. jets launched an airstrike against a suspected al-Zarqawi hideout in Fallujah on Friday the third such strike in less than a week. U.S. officials estimated up to 25 people were killed, however, Al-Jazeera television and a witness said the building was empty at the time

CNN quoted a U.S. official as saying a convoy which may have al-Zarqawi's had just arrived at the building. A man was blown down by the blast but was hustled away from the site by aides. In Washington, several Pentagon officials with access to information about the airstrike said account

U.S. readies embassy for Iraq transition

U.S. ambassador prepares for June 30 start to guiding government of Iraq

BY JIM KRANE

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — It's the biggest American handover of power since the United States and the Allies returned sovereignty to Germany and Japan after World War II.

But the Americans aren't leaving. They're merely adjusting their status Wednesday, shifting from running Iraq to guiding it.

"We are essentially going from being the sovereign government of Iraq to a U.S. embassy," said Rob Tappan, who heads the occupation authority's press office. "We become a partner of the people of Iraq as opposed to the governing body or a sovereign power."

The United States, Britain and other nations remain deeply involved in Iraq. Their troops will stay on, and the American and British governments are pursuing a mammoth aid effort.

U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte will be "field captain" of a huge American presence — and custodian of an S184 billion program for rebuilding Iraq, which officials describe as the largest foreign aid project in U.S. history.

But the incoming diplomats face the same predicament that hamstrung the occupation authority: a guerrilla war that virtually imprisoned Iraq's American and British rulers inside Baghdad's sealed-off green zone. The new team will still have to conduct diplomacy behind sandbagg walls and in armored cars.

wans and in armored cars.

The U.S. Embassy will house a staff of around 1,000 Americans, including State Department diplomats, contractors and hundreds of employees from myriad U.S. government agencies on temporary assignment.

Some 700 Iraqis are expected to take jobs at the U.S. Embassy, which will also have four outposts around Iraq with 100 Americans in each. The U.S. Agency for International Development will have about 100 employees in Baghdad.

Britain's new embassy plans a staff of around 100, along with 50 Iraqi workers. An additional 200 American and British consultants are expected to keep posts inside the Iraqi government.

The effort dwarfs other recent U.S. interventions to install new governments, such as the Dominican Republic in 1965, Grenada in 1983, Panama in 1989 and Haiti in 1994, all of which were quick, small-scale military operations.

The 14 months spent running Iraq is far less than the Allied rule of World War II's losers, however. The occupation of Japan ended in 1952 after seven years; West Germany did not regain full sovereignty until a decade after the war. in 1955.

That comparison is not quite apt, because Germany and Japan had to be resuscitated from the devastation of years of total war. In Iraq, the U.S.-led coalition won an easy victory over Saddam Hussein's regime, making common cause with Iraq's oppressed majority, although the insurgency is muddying that distinction.

The officials taking over from occupation chief L. Paul Bremer and his Coalition Provisional Authority are a who's who of international diplomats.

Negroponte assumes his seventh presidential appointment, after leaving his job as President Bush's U.N. envoy. He is perhaps best known for serving as President Reagan's ambassador to Honduras, from where U.S.-backed guerrillas fought against the leftist government of Nicaragua. Negroponte's team includes

James Jeffrey, former envoy to Albania, Turkey and Kuwait; Ron Neumann, ambassador in Bahrain; Steve Browning, ambassador to Malawi; and Robert Ford, a top Arabist also posted to Bahrain. Britain's embassy will be led by Ambassador Edward Chaplin, an Arabist who heads the Foreign Office's Middle East directorate.

The diplomats' toughest job will be the same that so frustrated Bremer and his staff: keeping themselves safe while meeting

Security "is our biggest preoccupation and concern, and that will take a lot of our resources," said Francis Ricciardone, the State Department's transition coordinator. "It's very hard to be a diplomat in a country and to speak with the people you've got to speak with from behind walls or armored cars or guard details.

Much of the diplomacy will be restricted to the green zone, an expanded version of Saddam's old governing compound that lives on as the seat of power.

But we do it and we manage

For the near term, Iraq's most important building will remain in American hands. Saddam's former Republican Palace, now CPA headquarters, will become the embassy annex, housing most U.S. Embassy functions.

The palace will be returned to the Iraqi government once new quarters are found, CPA spokesman Dan Senor said. The State Department is already negotiating to buy land in the green zone to build a new embassy, but that is likely to take a few years, Ricciardone said. Iraq's government will be temporarily headquartered in a bullet-pocked high-rise next to the Baghdad convention center.

Until three weeks ago, the building housed the U.S.-picked Iraqi Governing Council.

U.S. deaths in Iraq

The Associated Press

As of Friday, June 25, 848 U.S. servicemembers have died since the beginning of military operations in Iraq last year, according to the Defense Department. Of those, 627 died as a result of hostile action and 221 died of nonhostile causes

The British military has reported 58 deaths; Italy, 18; Spain, eight; Bulgaria and Poland, six each; Ukraine, four; Slovakia three; Thailand, two; Denmark, El Salvador, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia and the Netherlands have reported one each.

Since May 1, 2003, when President Bush declared that major combat operations in Iraq had ended, 710 U.S. servicemembers have died — 518 as a result of hostile action and 192 of nonhostile causes, according to the military as of

The Marines fired back and soon gained "fire superiority," where the enemy was ducking and the troops were able to maneuver. The platoon moved to a position where it was pointed toward the enemy fire but not at the houses in the distance or the cars on the highway.

They say the enemy is trying to goad them into coming into the city and the residential areas. The Marines didn't take the bait.

Instead, they dismounted their LAV-25s and pushed the enemy back past the hide-and-seek dunes behind the truck stop and held their position. Some of the bad guys who ran away ditched their weapons and reappeared as innocents.

Supervisor of Qatar R&R program puts heart into warfighters' break

BY FRED ZIMMERMAN Stars and Stripes

CAMP AS SAYLIYAH, Qatar — When Army Master Sgt. Ellie Walbridge came to Qatar, she couldn't believe the state of the facilities being used for the four-day Fighter Management Pass Program.

The welcome center was in a large, dirty, open-room ware-house with no air conditioning, said Walbridge, the program's Morale, Welfare and Recreation supervisor

It wasn't the proper facility to welcome combat troops looking for a four-day break from Opera tions Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom.

"I thought 'What are we trying to represent here,' " she said. "You want to create an inviting, relaxing atmosphere so [the troops] can come here and not be uptight

To create the right atmosphere, Walbridge went to the camp's top NCO, Sgt. Maj. George Ponder, and said she wanted to make things better. He quickly gave her the go-ahead.

The first step was moving the offices and welcome center for the program. She said the chapel and chaplain's offices had just moved out of the other end of the building, and that area was complete with offices and A/C.

Another improvement made was increasing the staff to work on the rest and recuperation program. When Walbridge arrived, she said, there were only two neople manning the offices. Now, she has a staff of 11 soldiers from the Walbridge left the active service in 1999 after more than 12 years, but remained part of the service with the Reserve in Minnesota, drilling with Headquarters, 3rd Brigade.

She said when she saw what was happening in Iraq and Afghanistan, she volunteered to go; instead, she was told she would serve stateside. She admits she was disappointed, but that quickly changed when the Army called and asked her to pick between Iraq and Afghanistan. She chose Things once again changed for Walbridge as she was told she was going to Cuba. But she was thrown another curveball less than two days before she was to leave. That's when she found out she was coming to Qatar.

"I want to be here because I love 'em. ... We owe them so much," Walbridge said of the troops that serve in Iraq and Afghanistan as tears filled her eyes. showing her concern for the young men and women.

'I volunteered because I thought, 'I can't do this anymore, it should be me there, not these young kids who haven't experienced life yet.' I want them to go home to be with their families to be safe and feel good about what they're doing. But I know it's not all going to happen." Walbridge's enthusiasm and en-

Diarrhea cases spark investigation of club

Sembach Combined Club off limits to Germans during probe, still serving food to U.S. troops

BY MARNI MCENTEE Stars and Stripes

KAISERSLAUTERN, Germany — German Bundeswehr soldiers have temporarily stopped eating at the Sembach Combined Club because 44 soldiers became ill after eating at the club last weekend.

All the soldiers had lunch or dinner at the club on Saturday and started coming down with diarrhea early Sunday morning, Ramstein Air Base spokesman Capt. Phil Ulmer said.

Under German regulations, the soldiers cannot eat at the facility until tests are conducted to determine the cause of the outbreak, said Maj. Thomas Gross, Commander of the Bundeswehr's Sembach and Hochspeyer contingents.

Two hundred German soldiers augment
U.S. troops providing security at Sembach and a munitions facility in Hochspeyer, Gross said. They now have to travel for every meal to Ramstein Air Base, where they eat either at the Rhineland Inn dining facility or the flight kitchen, Gross said. It's about a 30-minute trip by bus to Ramstein from Sembach.

"It's a little bit complicated to have lunch at Ramstein," Gross said. "We hope we can have food in Sembach again next week." The Sembach Combined Club has served the German soldiers three meals a day for 18 months, Gross said.

They are served in a separate buffet line that includes food catering to the German palate, club manager Lisa Pajac said. Food is still being served at the American side of the club she said

The full results are expected by the end of next week.

Food samples were taken from any leftovers from that day's meal. All ice and water at the facility also have tested negative for any bacteria, Ulmer said.

The tests are being analyzed at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center.

Public health workers inspect dining facilities and clubs once a month. Since the outbreak at Sembach, the club has been inspected three times this week, including no-notice inspections Ulmer said

On Saturday, 66 soldiers ate lunch at the club and 50 ate dinner, Gross said. The 44 who got sick took anti-diarrhea medicine and recovered, Gross said.

Watchdog group charges Nader in ethics complaint

BY SAM HANANEL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A watchdog group filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission against Ralph Nader on Friday, saying the independent presidential candidate is violating federal campaign laws by accepting office space and telephone service from a public charity he created.

from a public charity he created.

Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington alleges that Nader's campaign is renting valuable space at below-market prices from Citizen Works, an activist group that supports progressive causes.

The complaint also says Citizen Works and the Nader campaign share a common receptionist and several telephone lines. The watchdog group also filed a complaint with the Internal Revenue Service alleging that Citizen Works is violating its status as a charitable organization by benefing the Nader campaign. The IRS complaint asks the agency to enjoin Citizen Works from offering any further assistance to the campaign.

"Ralph Nader seems to think that because he founded Citize Works, he can use the organization as he sees fit," said Melanie Sloan, the watchdog group's executive director. "... No one, not even Ralph Nader, is exempt from campaign finance and tax laws."

Questions about the rental arrangement were first raised in a March 15 story in the online magazine Salon. Nader has denied any wrongdoing.

A watchdog group claims indepen dent presidential candidate Ralph Nader is violating federal campaign laws.

Nader spokesman Kevin Zeese called the allegations "totally false" and described the lawsuit as "completely frivolous and without merit." Zeese said the two organizations do not share phones and that a check with the building's landlord revealed the campaign is actually paying above-market rates for the space.

Cancer victim's son plans lawsuit over cigarette giveaways

The Associated Pres

BOSTON — The son of a woman who died of lung cancer is planning to sue the cigarette maker that gave her free samples when she was a girl, contending the giveaways were aimed at black children.

The lawsuit against Lorillard Tobacco Co., maker of Newport cigarettes, is thought by legal experts to be the first to accuse a tobacco company of targeting black children. It is to be filed Monday in Suffolk Superior Court, The Boston Globe reported in its Saturday editions.

urday editions.
Marie Evans, in interviews with lawyers before she died in 2002 at age 54, said as a child she would get free sample packs of four to 10 Newport cigarettes from a company van that regularly came to the Boston housing project where she lived.

Evans estimated she received free cigarettes 25 to 50 times—the first sample when she was 9—and traded them for candy until she was 13, when she started smoking.
"They have employed these

"They have employed these marketing strategies to target not only children, but children in the black community," said Rebecca McIntyre of Weisman and McIntyre, which is representing Evans's son, Will Evans.

There is no specific damage request.

Lorillard officials have known that Will Evans was considering a lawsuit for at least two years, but company lawyer Andrew J. McElaney said the Greensboro, N.C., company would have no comment until the complaint is filed. Only 14 out of hundreds of Only 14 out of nutureus or smoker lawsuits filed against tobacco companies in the past 50 years have prevailed, according to Northeastern University's Tobacco Products Liability Project, but the Evans lawsuit undermines the industry's standard argument against adult smokers that they were old enough to know better. "I don't think any of the other lawsuits have focused on the issue of the deliberate campaign of handing out free samples to a child," said Edward L. Sweda Jr., senior staff attorney at the Northeastern center.

State law banned giving cigarettes to children even in the 1950s, but McIntyre said Lorillard was so eager to attract young smokers that it deliberately broke the law.

Will Evans said his mother became a lifelong smoker of Newports and struggled to quit even after she became ill.

Evans said his mother believed Lorillard's assurances that its products did not cause cancer, despite evidence to the contrary.

After she was diagnosed with cancer, she became angry at the way Lorillard seduced her into smoking, and she continued depositions in preparation for the law-suit until the final weeks of her life.

Greg Connolly, the former director of the state's anti-smoking campaign, said Newports and other menthol cigarettes have been targeted to black youth, noting that more than half of black teenage smokers choose the Newport brand.

Norman Black, the creative director for the advertising agency that promoted Newport from 1974 to 1992, said his ad campaigns were geared toward young people, though not necessarily blacks, since they smoked Newports in large numbers anyway.

McIntyre said she has evidence that Lorillard tried to hook young smokers, including a 1963 memo from a top advertising executive to Lorillard's vice president that read: "There's nothing like starting them out young!"
Michael D. Weisman, who is Michael D. Weisman, who is also working on the Evans case, expects Lorillard to try "to bury us in paperwork," but he says it won't work.

"They set out to addict a child, addicted her and then killed her," he said. "We will have a trial."

Ohio threatens to sue over nuclear waste transfer

CINCINNATI — Ohio's attorney general said Friday he will sue the U.S. Energy Department if it attempts to remove radioactive waste from a former uranium processing plant without drawing up a plan to store the waste permanently.

The state of Nevada has threatened to sue the Energy Department to block its plan to ship the silo waste by truck from this year through 2006 to the department's Nevada desert site. With that plan in limbo, bloi officials fear the waste will be removed from the silos only to be temporarily stored elsewhere at the Fernald site, which for almost 40 years processed urnaium for the production of nuclear weapons.

Ohio Attorney General Jim Petro said his state would object to temporary storage of the waste at Fernald, 18 miles northwest of Cincinnati, because it could create environmental and health risks.

Under a cleanup plan that environmental regulators reached with the Energy Department years ago, the waste now stored in three concrete silos would be removed for permanent disposal elsewhere, Petro noted in a letter sent Friday to the Energy Department, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Attorney General John Ashcroft.

Kerry campaign goes bicoastal

36-hour tour includes N.Y., L.A.

BY NEDRA PICKLER The Associated Press

MASSILLON, Ohio — Comedian Billy Crystal teased John Kerry, "If you're having a good time, tell your face." But the dour-looking Democrat had an excuse for looking drawn Friday after scheduling 36 hours of nearly nonstop campaigning on both coasts plus a Midwest store.

Kerry's marathon itinerary included campaigning in down-and-out Stark County, Ohio, sandwiched between swanky fund-raisers in New York City and Los Angeles. The Los Angeles event was an A-list concert with artists such as Crystal, Barbra Streisand, Neil Diamond, Leonardo DiCaprio and Ben Affleck.

"Can we do this every night?" the presidential candidate said as the show wrapped up about 11 p.m. West coast time. "This is a great way to campaign."

Kerry was speaking two hours before he boarded his campaign charter for a four-hour redeye flight to Ohio, where he had to shrug off his fatigue to stump in this bellwether community that chose Republican George W. Bush four years ago.

"Will you do me a favor, help me get a better plane to sleep on come next November?" Kerry asked to laughter from the crowd of more than 2,000 gathered in a high school gymnasium.

Kerry then repeated a line he uttered minutes earlier about U.S. dependence on Middle East oil, drawing less vigorous applause than the first time.

After the rally, Kerry swung by the Pro Foothall Hall of Fame before he boarded his plane for the third time in 24 hours, this time to New York for a fund-raiser with lesbian, gay, transgendered and bisexual supporters at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. Former Vermont Governor Howard Dean warmed up the donors as they waited by telling them he's going cludes N.Y., L.A. to work his tail off for Kerry. Except he didn't use the word "tail."

"All I can say is, I the vice president of the United States is using the I-bomb on the Senate floor, I can use the a-word at an LGTB gathering," Dean said to laughter and applause from the crowd. They donated $1.8 million, split evenly between Kerry's campaign and the Democratic National Committee.

Kerry also joked about Dick Cheney's use of an epithet. "If you think Dick Cheney is cursing today, wait until you hear what he says on Nov. 2," Kerry told the do-

Less than three hours after Kerry arrived in New York, he was boarding the plane for a flight to his home in Washington and an end to his day-and-a-half tour.

He began Thursday morning in San Jose, Calif., with a speech on creating high-tech jobs. He then flew to Long Beach, Calif., accompanied by Arizona Gov. Janet Napolitano, who has been suggested as a possible running mate.

Kerry spokeswoman Stephanie Cutter said Kerry and Napolitano didn't discuss the vice presidency. But Kerry's running mate search coordinator, Jim Johnson, met recently with Gov. Bill Rich-ardson of New Mexico to discuss the vice presidential search, according to a Democratic official familiar with the conversation. The official said Kerry himself has not yet interviewed Richardson. He then traveled to the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles to find a glitzy crowd of 450 that included his concert entertainment dining on shrimp and filet mignon.

Kerry then rushed across the street to the Walt Disney Concert Hall, where he was lauded by the Hollywood lineup. Crystal called the event, which raised $5 million for Kerry's campaign and the Democratic National Committee, "Woodstock for really, really rich people."

Schwarzenegger grants strays a stay

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The hectoring barks of animal lovers convinced Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger to reverse himself Friday and keep California's law protecting stray dogs and cats at shelters.

"That's not me. I have three dogs. And of course I grew up with every animal you can think of," said Schwarzenegger, who credited his own daughter for convincing him to change his mind. "I'm an animal love."

Schwarzenegger's about-face came a day after animal rights groups began besieging the Capitol upon learning that the governor wanted to cut back a six-day holding period for animals at shelters. To save $14 million, the governor had proposed allowing dogs and cats to be euthanized within 72 hours.

Former state Sen. Tom Hayden, who wrote the law for dogs, cats, birds, rabbits, turtles, potbellied pigs and others trapped at shelters, said if the governor is good to his word, he will call off the dogs. The law requires shelters to hold animate for a minimum of six business days; four days if they stay open on weekends or one night a week. The act also forces people convicted of animal cruelty to pay for veterinary costs and remain pet-free for at least three years. And it requires animal shelters to look for adoption homes.

Streetcar renaissance is sweeping nation's cities

New Orleans leads charge in bringing back nostalgic transit

BY MARY FOSTER
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — For the first time in almost half a century, the city that inspired "A Streetcar Named Desire" once again desires streetcars.

New Orleans, home of the oldest, continuously operating streetcar line in the world, had done away with everything but the St. Charles line through the historic Garden District. Now that's changing. A third streetcar line just reopened and perhaps a dozen others – including the old Desire Street line — are on the planning boart.

"In New Orleans, streetcars have been part of our tradition," said Pat Judge, spokesman for the Regional Transit Authority. "Tourists like them, but our residents like riding them as well."

And New Orleans is not alone in its renewed fondness for the form of transportation once thought of as obsolete.

thought of as obsolete.
"They're very much in fashion again," said Jim Graebner, chairman of the American Public Transportation Association Heritage Trolley Task Force in Washington, D.C. He estimates at least 21 cities are adding or restoring trolley lines.
The renaissance of downtown areas as people move back from the suburbs, the charm of the old cars, their cleaner operation and improved durability all contribute to their popularity.

The $80.4 million line is the first streetcar to run in Tacoma since 1938

"We really are going back to the future," Tacoma Mayor Bill Baarsma said when it opened.

Baarsma said when it opened. From Portland, Ore., to Pittsburgh, Buffalo to Sacramento, cities have begun laying tracks and returning to streetcars, and others are looking into the possibili-

It's a big change from the thinking that all but killed the form of transportation. In New Orleans, which once had 225 miles of streetcar lines, the old cars began disappearing in the 1930s.

"You always hear that it was a plot by General Motors, a tire company and Esso Oil," said Michael Mizell-Nelson, who studied streetcars for his doctorate and is writing a book on them. "It wasn't. It was just part of the times"

Government funding policies and paving of city streets had a big influence on dropping the rail lines. So did the thinking of the

"At the time, buses were considered the modern way to travel," said Jimmy Fitzmorris, who was one of six city councilmen who yoted to get rid of the last of New Orleans' streetcars. "They were air-conditioned, they could pull up to the curb, they were economical."

But over the years, ridership on the St. Charles line remained strong and so did nostalgia for the streetcar.

In 1988, New Orleans opened a new streetcar line that runs along the Mississippi River, mostly transporting tourists between the French Quarter and the convention center. The line was constructed with the federal government kicking in 80 percent of the

It proved to be a huge success and led to the rebuilding of the Canal Street line. The $160 million line, with 80 percent paid in federal funds, attracted 125,000 riders the first week it was back in service in April.

The 1920s cars that clatter along St. Charles Avenue are not air-conditioned, the windows open to allow a breeze, the brakes squeal and the wheels rattle noisely on the tracks.

Molding, windows and doors are missing from this abandoned farmhouse near Hebron, Neb. The quest for vintage fixtures sends some down the felonious route, stealing from old farmsteads, houses, churches and school buildings.

Shabby Chic trend hard on old homes

Vintage fixtures are stolen from historic sites

BY COURTNEY LOWERY The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — In a world where shabby is chic and vintage is charming, thieves are stripping historic old farmsteads and rural houses of furnishings and fixtures to supply a growing black market

The ransacking of architectural details and other items has been going on for a long time, in big cities and the countryside alike.

But preservationists around the country say the Shabby Chic design movement and the advent of online marketplaces such as eBay appear to have made the problem worse in recent years.

"Before, people were stealing things like mantels but they didn't have anywhere to sell," said Elizabeth Brown, who runs the historic preservation division of the Alabama Historical Commission.

Historic sites in rural areas seem to be the hardest hit, simply because it is easier to get away with the crime in out-of-the-way places where there is no one around.

Old farmsteads, houses, churches and schools have been ransacked of doorknobs, moldings, mantelpieces, chests of drawers — even the markers that designate the sites as historic. Barns have been stripped of their planks to supply the burgeoning market in "reclaimed" lumber, often used to make fine wood

Greg Miller, a historical at the creation of the distribution of the distribution of the ety, said his family left a car in the driveway, a few lights on in the farmhouse and the radio going at their weekend getaway to put off thieves. It didn't work. At least four times in the past decade, thieves broke in and took bureaus, other furniture, even a set of figurines of three little pigs playing instruments.

Thieves stripped this door in the Hebron, Neb., farmhouse of its molding, probably to sell on eBay.

"The television was in there, but they didn't care about that, they didn't care about the radio, they didn't care about the toast-er," Miller said. "They had something specific in mind when they went in"

Across the country, most state preservation offices have stopped disclosing the locations of the buildings that they are restoring or that they list on the National Registry of Historic Sites for fear they may be providing road maps for thieves.

"It is always been a problem and we've gotten to the point that we're very cautious about telling people, even when we're marketing a house, where houses are that we know are empty," Brown said

"That's like saying, 'Here, come strip me.' "

Not only are thefts from historic homes hard to prevent, they are hard to prosecute. Tracking the stolen items is difficult and is often given low priority by law enforcement.

"Police are a whole lot more interested in murders and drug problems," Brown said.

The demand for such items is clear: A search of "vintage" in the home decor category of eBay results in a list of more than 4,000 items.

Man's tiny circus pays homage to history

BY LAURA WALSI The Associated Press

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. - The teeny display at the Barnum Museum tells a feel-good story of old circus days, when clowns and trapeze girls had the power to draw crowds to the street, and even close school. In the early 20th century, people cheered as the fancy parade wagons slowly made their way downtown. Children clutched posters torn from barns that boasted of trained jungle animals, as they tried to sneak peeks at the "Bearded Girl" and the "Sword Swallower."

"When I was a kid, you looked forward to circus day, like you would Christmas or your birthday," said William R. Brinley, 86, of Meriden. "It was a

A circus fan ever since his first show in 1926. Brinley has designed a miniature circus that features more than 5,000 carved figures and circus equip ment. It spans 1,100 square feet, a world in which 3/4-inch equals 1 foot.

Complete with five rings and two stages, the dis-play — a replica of a 1903 Barnum and Bailey tent circus — is made of just wood and cloth and took 36 years to put together. There's the 6-inch-tall ringmaster, tents (made from scraps of bed sheets) and plenty of cop clowns and hefty elephants.

cus a testament to Brinley's own life. When he was a boy, Brinley snagged free tickets to all the circuses that rolled into his hometown of Wallingford by volunteering to do "just about anything they needed."

And it was there that Brinley, equipped with his Brownie camera, tape measurer and pad and pencil. preserved all the tricks of the trade.

For those who look closely enough, Brinley made sure to include an elongated bed for the "Tall Lad" in his Sideshow car.

Brinley's favorite part of the circus has always een the animals, and he pays tribute to the famous circus trainer and old friend Terrell Jacobs by painting his name on the lion and tiger cages.

Brinley met Jacobs, who worked for a variety of circuses, after a Ringling Bros, show in 1938 in Hartford. The two remained friends until Jacobs' death.

Authenticity is what makes circus modelers tick, said Marlin Weaver, vice president for Circus Model Builders Inc. The group, founded in 1936, has nearly 1,500 members across the country

"Everybody's crazy about something. We just hap-pen to be crazy about circuses," said Weaver, of Palm Harbor, Fla. "It's just a little bit of history that you will never see again."

William R. Brinley, 86, poses with a section of the miniature circus that he has constructed at the Barnum Museum in Bridgeport, Conn., earlier this month. The circus is a replica of a 1903 Barnum & Bailey tent circus with more than 5,000 hand-carved figures.

Rapper DMX leaves the Queens County Courthouse in New York following his arraignment on Friday. Prosecutors filed additional charges Friday against him a day after he was arrested for allegedly impersonating a federal agent.

Drug, weapons charges added against rapper

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Prosecutors filed drug and weapons charges against rapper-actor DMX, a day after he was arrested for allegedly impersonating a federal agent and harassing another an airport parking lot

DMX, 33, allegedly crashed his sport-utility vehicle, which prosecutors said was equipped with lights and sirens, through a park-ing lot gate at Kennedy Airport after telling the attendant to let him leave because he was a government agent.

The complaint also said that the rapper, whose real name is Earl Simmons, ordered a driver at an adjacent parking lot to get out of his vehicle. When the man refused, Simmons allegedly identified himself as an FBI agent, grabbed the driver's seat belt uckle, and tried to pull him from the vehicle.

Simmons, 33, and a friend, Jackie Hudgins, 41, were arrested shortly afterward, said prosecutor Richard Brown.

Police found a billy club and ocks of crack cocaine in the vehicle. Brown said.

According to court documents Simmons claimed he had been cut off by the other car. Hudgins said he had tried to calm Simmons down, and that if he had paid the $9 parking fee the incident would not have happened.

Hudgins said he had given Simmons the $9 to pay the fee, court documents said. Prosecutors said that when Simmons was taken into custody, he had hundreds of dollars of cash on him.

Both men were charged with criminal possession of a weapon and controlled substance. Simmons is also charged with criminal mischief, impersonation, menacing, driving under the influence and other offenses. He was also charged with endangering the welfare of a child because the driver's 13-year-old daughter was in the car at the time.

The men, who remained iailed Friday, face up to seven years in prison if convicted.

Simmons and Hudgins were arraigned in Queens Criminal Court late Friday before Judge Stephen Knopf, who set bail of $15,000. They were scheduled to return to court on July 23.

Fire strands people in Alaska town

BY RACHEL D'ORO The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska - A 90-mile stretch of the Taylor Highway southeast of Fairbanks near the Canada border remained closed Friday because of wildfires, but fire managers were hoping for an opportunity to escort more stranded travelers from the tiny community of Chicken.

Officials were anxious to move people out, given a weekend forecast for more of the hot, dry weather that's fueled fires all week. There's also the potential for lightning, said Kevin Koechlein, fire information officer for the state Division of Forestry.

About half of the 200 people stuck in the old mining community were led in a convoy to Tok. about 70 miles to the southwest. early Friday when fire activity was diminished by cooler temperatures and higher humidity. About 50 RVs and 10 motorcycles were among the 70 vehicles in the caravan, Koechlein said.

Another convoy carried fuel, food and water to Chicken on Friday afternoon as fires burned on both sides of the highway. If conditions cleared enough, part of the convoy was to continue another 94 miles to Eagle, a town of 126 also near the Canada border where a 10,000-acre fire was "That whole area is just socked in by smoke between that fire and fires in Canada," Koechlein said. Three other fires prompted the closure of the Taylor Highway on Thursday on both sides of Chicken, an unincorporated town of 21.

The north flank of a 33,000-acre fire was about one mile south of Chicken, Closer to Tok, another fire was estimated at 15,000 acres. A fire about six miles east of Chicken was growing but the number of acres was not available because it was too smoky to map

Altogether, 52 fires were active across the state Friday. Fires have burned more than 350,000 acres in Alaska this year, fire offi-

Bush gets EU to back NATO role in Iraq security

By TERENCE HUNT The Associated Pres-

NEWMARKET-ON-FERGUS, Ireland - The United States and the European Union offered strong support for Iraq's urgent request for NATO military help Sat-urday. "NATO has the capability and I believe the responsibility to help the Iraqi people defeat the terrorist threat that's facing their country," President Bush said.

"I think the bitter differences of the war are over," Bush said at the close of a U.S.-European Union summit. "There is a common interest and a common goal to help the Iraqi people."

The United States and the European Union agreed in a joint statement to back Iraq's request for NATO military and support the training of Iraqi security forces. and to reduce Irag's international debt, estimated to be $120 billion. Diplomats said later Saturday that NATO nations have reached a tentative agreement on plans to help train Iraq's armed forces.

But the joint statement also made a veiled criticism of abuse of prisoners by American soldiers. We stress the need for full respect of the Geneva Conventions, the statement said, referring to international accords setting out guidelines for the humane treatment of prisoners. The single sentence was an unstated but obvious reference to the Abu Ghraib prison scandal and the treatment of detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. EU leaders raised the topic with Bush in their private meetings Saturday, and also aired it publicly during a joint news conference. "These things unfortunately happened, and of course we wish they didn't. But they do," Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern said. "What's important is how they're dealt with."

Bush said, "It did harm, It did harm." But he said the American investigations will be done openly, as opposed to the secrecy of Sadd-am Hussein's atrocities. "I don't remember any international investigation of what took place in Iraq" under Saddam, Bush said.

Bush also described the threat posed by Jordanian-born militant Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, who has been linked to al-Qaida and is thought to be responsible for hundreds of deaths in Iraq. "He is a problem because he is willing to kill innocent people," the president said.

The U.S.-EU joint statements were largely a victory for Bush, attending the first of two summits over five days. They sent him on to the NATO summit beginning Sun-their gathering.

Iraqi prime minister Ivad Allawi sent a letter to NATO this week pleading for "urgent help" from the alliance to build up Iraqi rces "to defeat the terrorist threat and reduce reliance on foreign forces.

The news conference was held outside a 16th-century castle that was heavily guarded against security threats and from the thousands of demonstrators protesting Bush's policies in Iraq

At Bush's next stop, in Ankara, Turkey, police fired tear gas canisters as more than 100 left-wing demonstrators hurled rocks and used sticks to try to break down a police barricade during a protest against Bush's arrival.

The EU statement encouraged other international organizations - such as the World Bank, International Monetary Fund and oth-- to support Iraq's economic and political reconstruction, focusing on projects identified by the interim government.

The United States and 25-nation EU pledged to help reduce Iraq's estimated $120 billion foreign debt.In other declarations and statements issued at the close of the brief summit, the United States and EU agreed to:

■ Better combat terrorism by sharing data on lost and stolen passports, work more closely on hunting down terrorist' financing networks and increasing coopera-tion between law enforcement agencies on both sides of the Atlan-

■ Expand cooperation to pre-vent the spread of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery systems.

■ Back continued peace talks to end 20 years of civil conflict in southern Sudan, and advance efforts being made by the United Nations to bring peace to all Sudan and address humanitarian and human rights crises in Darfur in western Sudan.

Reader's Digest wants to find out which military service is the funniest.

The monthly magazine is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its "Humor in Uniform column by running a contest to find the most humorous true anecdotes from military life. Active-duty, Reserve and retired servicemembers and their families can participal

Entries must be submitted to www.rd.com/starsstripes by June 30. They also can be mailed to: "The Funniest Branch of the Military Contest," Reader's Digest, P.O. Box 1598, Newburgh, NY 12550.

Entries must include the entrant's full name, e-mail address and street address. Anecdotes should be no more than 100 words, true, original and related to the armed services.

The magazine's editors will select finalists from each service to appear in the September edition. Readers will then be asked to log on to www.rd.com to choose their favorite, and their votes will determine the winner.

The winner will receive an all-expense-paid trip for two to St. Kitts Marriott & Royal Beach Casino in the Caribbean. The other four finalists will receive S500. Those whose anecdotes are selected for publication in future "Humor in Uniform" columns will receive S300.

U.N. takes over Haiti peacekeeping as Air France's director fatally shot

BY AMY BRACKEN The Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - The United Nations took command of a peacekeeping mission Friday. relieving a U.S.-led force a day after Air France's di rector in the country was shot and killed.

The death of Didier Mortet was the latest in a rash of violence that poses a major challenge to the U.N. force that will help Haiti's U.S.-backed interim leaders stabilize the nation after former president Jean-Bertrand Aristide was pushed from power on Mortet, 49, was riding in a car with his wife and a chauffeur when gunmen on a motorcycle opened fire, hitting him twice, said French Embassy spokesman Eric Bosc. The other two were unharmed

Amnesty International condemned the killing, saying that U.S. troops and Haitian leaders had failed to disarm violent groups.

"The availability of weapons and the climate of impunity continue to fuel insecurity and human rights violations in Haiti, as measures to stop this are nowhere to be seen," the London-based human rights group said in a statement.

Although the official transfer was earlier this month, U.N. troops assumed command Friday from a 3,600-member U.S.-led multinational force that included France, Canada and Chile, Most of the American troops had departed Haiti by Friday night.

A Brazilian-led force of an estimated 6,700 troops and more than 1,000 international police will work with the interim government for six months to prepare the country for elections next year and train the police

The country is still struggling to rebuild the police force after many pro-Aristide officers fled their posts during the rebellion.

"One gets the impression that someone somewhere is planning, organizing and carrying out this climate of insecurity," interim Prime Minister Ger-ard Latortue said at the handover ceremony.

"Today we need the support and the understanding of all our friends in the international communi-

U.S. Marine Brig. Gen. Ronald Coleman, who led the three-month U.S.-led mission, said the six-month U.N. mandate was too short.

"I think this is the time for the international community to give Haitians a chance," he said. "That means a long-term commitment. The Brazilian commander for the U.N. mission, Lt. Gen. Augusto Heleno, said he expects the mission's greatest challenge to be to disarm the groups that helped oust Aristide.

"It is a long-term mission," he said, and one that depends on "the Haitian police, the Haitian authorities, and the support of the Haitian people.

Officials: Pakistan prime minister resigns

BY STEPHEN GRAHAM

The Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan - Prime Minister Zafarullah Khan Jamali tendered his resignation Saturday, the government said, following months of speculation that his relationship with the country's military ruler was strained

"Prime Minister Jamali has resigned and will announce his successor at the meeting," Information Minister Sheikh meeting," Rashid Ahmed said, referring to a gathering of the ruling party called for later Satur-

Rumors have circulated for months that relations between Jamali and the country's power broker, President Gen. Pervez Musharraf, had chilled. Jamali had sought to quash the rumors, even professing his "love" of the general, but Musharraf offered him no clear public support.

Observers say Musharraf grew impatient at Jamali's inability to rein in opposi tion lawmakers and effectively defend Musharraf's policies.

The move was unlikely to have a significant impact on Pakistani foreign policy including its support for the U.S.-led war on terrorism and tentative peace talks with India - which remains firmly under Musharraf's control. But it raised fresh concern about the country's return to democracy, five years after Musharraf seized power in a military coup

Liaqat Baluch, an opposition lawmaker, accused Musharraf of trying to ensure that no strong political rival can emerge.

"They stoked the fire around Jamali and then pushed him into it," said Baluch, a member of the six-party religious coalition opposed to Musharraf, "The military rulers want to maintain their supremacy so that no political government is stable.

Ruling party leader Chaudry Shujiat Hussain and Commerce Minister Humayun Khan were among a short list of possible successors

Under powers granted in constitutional amendments after Musharraf's 1999 coup, the general has the power to dismiss Jama li and Parliament if he chooses, but it appeared that the prime minister had stepped down rather than be fired.

Jamali and Musharraf met earlier Saturday for what Jamali spokesman Majeed Niazi described at the time as discussions on enlarging the Cabinet.

One of the country's most-seasoned politicians, Jamali became prime minister in November 2002 after the PML-Q, which supports Musharraf, won the most seats in ections the month before.

His appointment helped ease concerns in the West about the rise to prominence of ultraconservative religious parties. But those worries flared anew last month when Maulana Fazlur Rahman, a pro-Taliban cleric, became leader of the opposition.

Soft-spoken and a little stiff, Jamali is a powerful figure in his southern home province of Baluchistan. But as the choice of Musharraf, he has also drawn stiff criticism from Pakistan's two other major political parties - the PML-N and the Pakistan People's Party.

The stock market in Pakistan's southern city of Karachi fell Friday on rumors Jama-li might step down. Investors worry that no clear successor is in place to help guide Pakistan as it edges back toward civilian rule. On Saturday, gunmen riding a motorcycle sprayed a car carrying Bin Yamin Rizvi, a local PML-N leader, with bullets in the eastern city of Lahore, killing him along with his driver and bodyguard.

Lahore police chief Tarig Saleem said he had no leads on who was behind the attack

Bus bomb kills 2 working to register Afghan voters

BY MATTHEW PENNINGTON The Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan - A bomb tore through a bus carrying female election workers Saturday on their way to regis-ter women for the country's first post-Taliban vote, killing two of them and injuring 13 others.

A spokesman for the Taliban claimed responsibility for the attack, the bloodiest yet in a string of violence directed at election workers.

The killings add to pressure on NATO leaders meeting in Turkey next week to send more peacekeepers ahead of the September polls, amid warnings from the United Nations that security must im-

U.S.-backed President Hamid Karzai condemned the bombing and blamed 'enemies of peace and prosperity" in Afghanistan. He urged voters not to be intimidated. U.N. spokesman Manoel de Almeida e

Silva said two women were killed and 11 women and two children were wounded in the attack on the outskirts of the city of Jalalabad, 75 miles east of Kabul.

Four of the injured were in critical condition, including a child who was traveling with his mother. The bomb was believed planted inside the bus. The driver fled just before the blast, but was later arrested and was in Afghan custody, the U.N. spokesman said. Abdul Hakim Latifi, who claims to speak for the Taliban, said the bomb was detonated by remote control, and threatened more violence

"We will not forgive any man or woman who is supporting U.S. policies.
We will continue this kind of attack to make sure the elections fail," Latifi said in a telephone call from an undisclosed location.

De Almeida e Silva said the movement of female election staff was restricted after the attack as the security situation was assessed, but registration of women voters was continuing "wherever possible." He did not elaborate.

Critics accuse Washington of pushing for a quick vote so President Bush, who ordered the U.S.-led invasion to oust the Taliban in late 2001, can claim a foreign policy success in bringing democracy to Afghanistan before the U.S. election in November.

So far, only about half of the estimated total of eligible Afghan voters are registered, and many of those live in relatively secure cities

Garbage protest halts trains

ROME - Thousands of travelers were stuck on trains Saturday when protesters near Naples blocked tracks to protest a local garbage dump, cutting rail service to and from southern Italy. Several hundred protesters occupied the station of Montecorvino Rovella, about 40 miles southeast of Naples.

The state rail company Trenitalia said several dozen trains and thousands of travelers had been blocked since the protest began Friday evening. Most travelers were transferred to coaches; boats were used to get passengers to Sicily; a few dozen passengers were put up in hotels

Officials around Naples have long struggled to deal with heaps of garbage and too few dumps.

Ruins at Auschwitz to undergo preservation The conservation work, expected to start

The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland - The ruins of gas chambers and crematoria at the former Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp complex will be preserved as a "warning" to future generations, a spokesman for the memorial site said Tuesday.

The gas chambers and crematoria at the Birkenau part of the camp have been in ruins since the Nazis blew them up in an at-tempt to hide evidence of their crimes as the Soviet army advanced toward the end of World War II.

The gas chambers at Birkenau were built in 1942 as part of the Nazi drive to ex-terminate Europe's Jews. The Birkenau and Auschwitz camps are a little more than a mile apart in the next few weeks, is being undertaken because "the ruins will disappear if nothing happens," said Jarek Mensfelt, spokesman for the Auschwitz memorial museum.

"This is an attempt to keep it as it is now in ruins - but not to let the ruins go, Mensfelt said. "It was meant to be here forever as a warning.

More than a million people, most of them Jewish, perished in gas chambers or died of starvation and disease at the Auschwitz-Birkenau complex between 1940 and 1945

In another development, archeologists searching for Jewish religious relics at the site of a synagogue near the former Auschwitz camp have found a treasure trove of menorahs and candelabra lost since the Nazis burned down the building in 1939, officials said Tuesday

The objects, found Monday, included candelabra decorated with symbolic eagles of Poland and the former Austro-Hungarian Empire, which controlled the area until World War I, said Tomasz Kuncewicz, director of the Auschwitz Jewish Center.

Kuncewicz said he believed members of the Jewish community hid them in haste to keep them from falling into Nazi hands.

"These discoveries remind us that before the Nazis built Auschwitz, there was a thriv-ing Jewish town of Oswiecim," said Julius Berman, chairman of the group that funded the excavation.

Odd campus incidents

NC RALEIGH — Four men, including three students at North Carolina State University, have been charged with illegally accessing the computers of campus police and changing the daily list of incidents.

Former student David Travis Oakley, 25, of Willow Spring, was in the Wake County jail with bond set at $25,000. He located a pass-word in "a secure area" and passed it to others, according to his arrest warrant.

Jonathon Lee Hamilton, 23, of Raleigh, and Nicholas John Heling, 19, of Nashville, were also arrested, NCSU police spokesman Jon Barnwell said. Hamilton was released after posting $5,000 bail. Gavin Deare, 19, of Fairfax, Va., had arranged to surrender, Barnwell said.

A member of the media alerted campus police to the bogus postings, which appeared May 15, he

Low quality of care

DES MOINES — A state agency that oversees nursing homes is fielding more complaints about the quality of care. A report shows that in 2003, the office received 977 complaints.

That's double the number of complaints in 2001, and a 19 percent increase from 2002.

Fatal hit-and-run

NY NORTHPORT — An emergency medical technician responding to a fatal hit-and-run accident told police at the scene he might have struck the victim the night before.

Brian Leddy, a captain with the Eatons Neck volunteer fire department on Long Island, was arrested Friday after both he and officers noticed that debris in the road matched his 2003 Dodge truck, police said.

The victim, identified as Thomas Cote, 60, was found at the end of his driveway. Police said Cote was apparently hit while getting mail from his mailbox.

Toxic Hawaii

HONOLULU — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says a slight increase has been reported in the amount of toxic chemicals released in Hawaii in 2002.

The EPA said in a news release issued in San Francisco that reportable releases increased by 2 percent over the previous year.

The hike was primarily due to an increase in reporting from federal facilities and electric generating facilities, the agency said.

Easy access to records

AUSTIN — It's now easier for Texans to get their driving records.

Copies of driving records are now available online, the Department of Public Safety announced Thursday.

The new service allows eligible driver license and commercial driver license holders to order a driver record using a credit or debit card, the DPS said.

Information from the applicant's current Texas driver's license is needed to use the online service.

Don't leave dog inside car

Despite all the warnings, I still see dogs (and occasionally, a cat) left inside of parked cars outside the post exchange or commissary on a regular basis.

With these wonderful summer temperatures, we have to remember that dogs can suffer and die when left inside parked cars, even on mildly warm days. On a 78-degree day, the temperature inside a shaded car is 90 degrees, while the inside of a car parked in the sun can reach 160 degrees in minutes. Imagine poor Fluffy or Fido sitting in a 160-degree car, wearing a fur coat on top of that! Animals can succumb to heatstroke in just 15 minutes. If you see a dog left alone in a car. please take down the car's color, model, make, and license plate number and have the owner paged inside the store, or call the police

Do whatever is necessary to get the dog out of the car. His or her life may depend on it

Recently two letters were published. and I wish to address the authors of both The first was entitled "Enforce military standards" (June 15). The writer made the statement, "The military serves one purpose: to fight and win this nation's wars. To forgive the deserter for any reason is

It is a shame that the writer does not understand that the military's sole purpose is to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. Sometimes that means taking up arms. Most of the time it does not

I, too, served in the military, I always considered first and foremost that it was my duty to support and defend the Constitution. As a civilian, I still believe it is my duty, first and foremost. The writer's statement about forgiving someone as being wrong, unfortunately that speaks volumes. The second letter was entitled, "Soldiers have rights, too" (June 17).

The writer was correct: soldiers do have rights. All free men have rights, but we also have responsibilities that accompany those rights.

We should each take a moral stand on issues, great and small, And, we should be willing to accept the consequences of taking that stand.

Refusing to kill is a moral stand: refusing to go is a criminal act (in the military). A person who commits a criminal act should expect to be punished.

I don't know the details about the Muslim soldier he mentioned, but I'm willing the writer doesn't know either.

The writer also asked why a person can not just "quit" the military. Because we sign a contract. "They" can't just fire me, and I can't just quit.

It is all a part of taking a moral stand, you either honor your word or you don't.

When can we go home?

I have been a supporter of the military policies that our government has executed on its soldiers. Although many of them have been questionable, I have kept my mouth shut

However, a story in Stars and Stripes, F-15E Strike Eagles return from Middle East," (June 18) was the proverbial last straw

It was a story about an Air Force unit that finally returned home after a grueling and strenuous three-month tour to the Middle East.

Get real I know it's hard on families but three months? That's only a field exercise. You don't even have enough time to get acclimated to the weather.

My unit has been on ground for more than 12 months, with second extension orders that should put us over 19 months on ground.

That's nothing compared to other Army and Marine units that have been on ground since the beginning of this action, with no idea of when they will get to go home to their families. Watching others come and go hurts the soldier trapped here by political agendas. All we get is,

"Sorry, and we are doing our best." Just a little note: Your best is not good enough for our soldiers and our families.

Since my unit started this tour, my soldiers and I have been proud to do our duty no matter what. We have only asked one very important question a simple question .. when can go home?

Now you may think this a stupid or dumb question. But we don't mind if you say June 1, 2005, or Aug. 26, 2004, Just give us a date and stick to it.

We read about units going home after three- or 6-month tours because they don't have a mission. Well, my unit is a transportation unit that has no mission, so we got reclassified, so now we are force-protection military police.

I say stop for a second and give our warriors a break, starting with those soldiers in the north. Send them home to their loved ones and keep these short-timers here a little while longer.

I personally would rather hear about a homecoming of a unit that has been here for more than a year. At least that would mean our government has not forgotten about us and may be working on getting us to our families.

Letting us know about newbies going back is just a slap in the faces to those have worked, sweat, bled and died for this cause

To the families and the men who got to go home after three months, I say, "Thank God vou are home and safe, and thank you for the service you have done. We just miss our families, too.

OPINION

What newspapers are saying at home

The following editorial excerpts are selected from a cross section of newspapers throughout the United States. The editorials are provided by The Associated Press and other stateside syndicates

Follow through on Afghanistan The Sacramento (Calif.) Bee

Hamid Karzai visited Washington this month, staying just long enough to allow President Bush to showcase the popular Afghan president as the face of what Bush calls a major U.S. success in the war on terrorism. But that picture is distorted Karzai thanked America again for ousting the Taliban regime, depriving al-Qaida of a base of operations and putting Afghanistan on the path to self-government. But he also cited some umpleasant truths — for example, that the country has the world's second-highest infant and maternal mortality rates and desperately needs aid and investment.

But if the past is a guide, $4.4 billion in reconstruction funds pledged by donor nations in March will be slow to arrive. ... Yet the prime victims are the Afghan people, who deserve better.

Caught between self-serving regional warlords, a resugent guerrilla force and foreign donors who deliver less than they promise, Hamil Karzai is forced to make compromises — and to gloss over painful realities to obtain what he can. But failure to provide aid and security would betray and died for them. As in Itang, Bush is either focused too narrowly on his own interests or still thinks nation-building can be done on the cheap, with the help of a few photo-ops. It can't.

Conditions favor redeployment The Buffalo (N.Y.) News

Details are lacking, but the Pentagon's plan to redeploy forces now stationed in former hot spots from the Cold War is at least sensible and possibly urgent. Thousands of troops have been stationed in Germany since the end of World War II, first to stabilize the broken country, then as a strategic counter to the expansionist aims of the Soviet Union. But the Soviet Union does not exist anymore.

By the same taken the decision to cut

By the same token, the decision to cut the number of U.S. troops in South Korea by a third—about 12,000—is an affirmation of the reality that Seoul's forces are now capable, with the help of American air power, of defending the country.

The threat the United States and its Western allies face today is more likely to come from the Middle East or Central Asia. If the nation is going to station forces in foreign lands, it should be based on existing conditions, not a memory of decades gone by. ...

If the nation has fewer troops than necessor is that we still have them in Germany and South Korea, as well as Japan. ... With the World Trade Center obliterated and Iraq a shooting gallery, it's hard to see how troops in Germany and South Korea serve the nation's needs in the 21st century.

Get to heart of pledge suit The Courier, Findlay, Ohio

The Supreme Court copped out. Rather than taking the opportunity to rule, once and for all, on the constitutionality of the phrase "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance, the court (this month) took a pass. It instead ruled 5-3 that the plaintiff, atheist Michael Newdow, could not legally represent his daughter because he lacks full custody.

The court's decision leaves the schools free to continue to recite the pledge, including the disputed phrase "under God." But for how long? It's a near certainty that sooner or later, Newdow or some body else will try again.

The court lost an opportunity to affirm the right of all Americans to acknowledge God in public — if they so choose.

Haste makes waste disappear The State, (Columbia, S.C.)

Whatever happens on the munitions and energy front, one thing cannot be denied. A national, long-term examination leads to the inescapable conclusion that [the] Savannah River Site is not the best long-term repository for any of our nation's high-level radioactive waste.

SRS is dangerously close to natural resources that make it a poor choice for permanent waste storage. It is near important water sources, the Tuscaloosa aquirer and the Savamana River. The site sits at the edge of a seismic fault, and the threat of future earthquakes along this fault is real. Populated areas, including Meanwhile, 37 million gallons of high-level radioactive waste remain housed in aging tanks at SRS.

For more than 20 years, national law has specified that the waste will be solidified and moved to a permanent, deep geologic repository. However, politics, the high cost and some interest group objections have blocked the opening of such a facility at Yucca Mountain in Nevada. ...

We call upon Congress and the U.S. Department of Energy to move ahead with the funding and authorizations necessary to begin the process of solidifying and moving high-level radioactive waste to Yucca Mountain. ... It is long past time, the process of constructing and operating a permanent, national discussed in the process of constructing and operating a permanent, national discussed in the process of constructing and operating a permanent, national discussed in the process of the

Faulty incident reports typical Dayton (Ohio) Daily News

The U.S. State Department put out a report a couple of months ago ... that the number of terrorist incidents has dropped steadily from 2001 through 2003, reaching a 34-year low.

Recently, however, Secretary of State Colin Powell has admitted that the report was wrong.

The State Department left entire countries out of its count; it gave special weight to terrorist acts that resulted in no deaths, injuries or major property damage, and it discontinued its 2003 count two months before the end of year.

Normally, in situations like this, somebody calls for an investigation into how the foul-up happened.

However, given the quality of the Bush administration's other information-gathering and analytical exercises lately, maybe there's no point.

Taking on a 'Life' of its own The Anniston (Ala.) Star

If the weeklong memorial leading up to the funeral of former President Reagan marked a return to the '80s, then the rush of news and comment in recent and coming days over the release of former President Clinton's memoir represents a return to the '90s. With that return comes a resurgence of all the familiar debates a

Among some there'll be a return of adoration for the man and his progressive, forward-looking policies, most notably an economic revival. Among others there'll be scorn cast from those who continue to blame Clinton for everything from a loss of American "values" to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11. ...

Notably, unlike other recent presidential memoirists, Clinton himself is believed to have written the first draft of the memoir in longhand. The result is a publishing phenomenon likely to have repercussions on everything from the Iraqi occupation, to the war on terrorism to the upcoming presidential election.

At more than 900 pages, "My Life" is not what typically comes to mind as a "beach read." Yet given the subject and the wide range of emotions it causes, it could certainly become one.

Students owed help with debt Star Tribune, Minneapolis

If a college education hasn't already turned this year's grads into cynics, Congress is considering a proposal that should do the trick: Just as student loan interest rates hit an all-time low, key lawmakers want to deny new graduates the opportunity to lock in today's low rates through loan consolidation.

Instead, leading Republicans and a few Democrats on the House Committee on Education and the Workforce propose that federally guaranteed student loans be consolidated only on a variable-rate basis. ... Making the grads pay more would be in keeping with the last quarter-century's U.S. policy trend in higher education financing.

We finally heard his voice. It was difficult to not be chilled by the words of Mohamed Atta on the tape [recently] played before the Sept. 11 commission. The words were cold and deceifful; his tone was deceptively calm. What would you exdenouement of the commission's public testimony gave a clearer picture of the chaos and misjudgments made in the air that day. Tapes and testimony reinforced the fact that responsibility for preventions the awful events of Sept. 11, 2001, cannot be placed on one back, but many. There were the air traffic controllers who misunderstood messages. There was the FAA worker who, when pressed by the national Air Traffic Control System Command Center for an order to scramble fighter jets at United Flight 93 over Pennsylvania, replied: "Uh, ya know everybody just left the room." [This month's] testing was the property plans were make daily tests and dry but so f Sopt. 11-like scenarios. That's at least one positive step...

The commission's report will surely contain some political bombshells. We must be quick to clear away the smoke from these and seize the opportunity to glean as much knowledge as we can from this horrific experience. Sadly, as the family of Paul Johnson now knows, al-Qaida's war against us didn't end on Sept 11.

Lewinsky rebuffs Clinton's claims in autobiography

BY SUE LEEMAN

The Associated Press

NDON — Monica Lewinsky begs to diffe

The former White House intern scorned Bill Clinton's explanation that he had an affair with her "just because I could," and accused the former president of failing to correct the record and make clear their relationship was mutual in his new memoir.

In her first public comments on the book, "My Life," Lewinsky accused Clinton of trying to destroy her with his characterization of the affair as something dirty and wrong, and argued the liaison was one of mutual affection.

and argued the mason was one of indudar anection.

"I really didn't expect him to go into detail about our relationship" in the book, the 30-year-old Lewinsky said in an interview with The Daily Mail. "But if he had and he'd done it honestly, I wouldn't have minded. ... I did, though, at least expect him to correct the false statements he made when he was trying to protect the presidency."

"Instead, he talked about it as though I had laid it all out there for the taking. I was the buffet and he just couldn't resist the dessert," she was quoted as saying.

In an interview with Independent Television News, Lewinsky said she was especially upset by Clinton's assertion on CBS' "60 Minutes" that he embarked on the affair "just because

Lewinsky

Clinton, in an interview Thursday on CNN's "Larry King Live," said he realized the comment could sound harsh but that it was not intended to offend Lewinsky.

"When I say I did it because I could, if you take it out of context it sounds jolting and snipping and arrogant and unfeeling toward Monica Lewinsky or my family," he said, according to a CNN transcript.

"That is not what I meant ... Anybody who's lived a certain time has made some mistakes. If you look back on your life and you think about the things that you did wrong that tain time has made some missakes. If you took back on your life and you think about the things that you did wrong that you knew at the time you shouldn't do, about the best explanation is you did it because you could. Not just in this context—in many contexts."

"But what I was hoping, and did expect, was for him to acknowledge and correct the inaccurate and false statements that he, his staff and the DNC [Democratic National Committee] made about me when they were trying to protect the presidency. His strategy to try and defeat [former special prosecutor] Ken Starr was to debase my character." "In the process he destroyed me."

Clapton guitar sells for close to $1M

NEW YORK — One of Eric Clapton's prize guitars sold for a record $959,500 at an auction that raised more than $7.4 million for a drug treatment center, auction house officials said

"Blackie," the black-and-white Fender Stratocaster that served as Clapton's sole stage and studio guitar from 1970 to 1985, was the most expensive ever sold at auction, Christie's said in a statement.

The buyer of Clapton's guitar — one of 56 he offered Thursday — was not disclosed.

Proceeds will go to the Crossroads Centre in Antigua, an addiction treatment center Clapton established in 1998. Clapton overcame a heroin addiction years ago. AFRTS Television Schedule ol read that Prince William, the 22-year-old future king of England, has a girlfriend. What can you tell me about her? — Dick Wells, New Orleans

In I : — LICK WEBS, NEW OTBERNS

She is Kate Middleton, 22, the prince's housemate at the Hunversity of St. Andrews in Scotland. The willowy daughter of wealthy commoners who own a mail-order business, she's an art history major who shares William's love of sports. Kate is the handsome royal's first serious girlfriend, but we doubt that she will be his last.

Pundits Bill O'Reilly and Al Franken have been feuding since Franken said O'Reilly lied about his uppringing and about winning an award. Who's telling the truth? — P.B., Great Neck, N.Y.

It's ntipicking. Franken cited an inaccurate Inceport that O'Reilly was raised in middle-class Westbury, N.Y., not nearby working-class Westbury, N.Y., not nearby working-class Levittown. We saw the needs to the property of the property of the New Yorking Contributing Editor, did with the Wo Emmys and other awards listed at his Fox News Web site. YOUR MONEY

Filling out W-4s is taxing task

Susie Besaw, from the book "The Savvy Sailor's Spouse," is new to the military lifestyle but is eager to learn more about how to manage her family and her new lifestyle through the monthly Family Readiness Group meetings of her husband Jake's new command. Last week, Petty Officer Porch talked about LES etty Officer Porch continued, "The next topic is taxes. I was reluctant to talk about taxes, but your president requested it. Please don't shoot the messen-Money U.

ger "Understanding your taxes is not as difficult as many make it out to be. Remember this presentation is just an overview of the basics, and everybody's tax situation is different.

"Go ahead and look at your second handout, which includes examples of your W-2, W-4 and Form 1040EZ

"In January, the Navy will send you your Form W-2 to summarize your pay and taxes withheld from the previous year.

"Withheld?" a woman in the front asked

"Yes. Our tax system is 'pay-as-you-go,' " he replied. he replied. 'The Navy withholds or takes money out of each navcheck sends it to the government. You control how much have the Navu money the Navy takes out of your paycheck by filling out a W-4 correct amount form. Your annual goal should be to have the Navy each paycheck take out the correct amount of taxes from each paycheck - neither too much nor too little.'

"How do I figure out how much money to take out from each paycheck?" the same woman asked "That is where the W-4 comes in," he replied. "You adjust your taxes by selecting allowances on vour W-4 form. The Navy adjusts the amount of money taken from each paycheck for each allowance you take."

"How will I know how many allowances to take?" the woman in the front row asked.

"Here is a simple rule of thumb to follow: Always start with two allowances and add an allowance for each of the following: one if you are married, one for every child you maintain, one if you buy a home and one if you maximize a retirement account contribution. he replied

"Following your rule of thumb, my spouse and I should take three allowances on our W-4 right now since we don't have any children and don't have an IRA?" she asked

"In general, yes," he replied, 'But remember we only want the Navy to take out the correct amount of taxes from each paycheck - neither too much nor too little. Use the allowances rule of thumb to approximate; then, calculate this year's actual taxes in advance for your budget as a double-check. "Let me see if I can put together an example to help," the petty officer ma'am? "He just made E-5 and he has been in for four years," she re-

Porch started writing on the white board.

When he finished, he continued, "Just follow these steps to estimate your actual taxes in 2004:

Your goal should be to take out the of taxes from

— neither too much nor too little.

"Step one, figure your annual base pay. A married E-5 with than four more years of service makes $1 991 a month or $23.892 video games.

"Step two, subtract $15,900 the sum of your 2004 standard deduction of $9.700 and two personal exemptions of $6,200. $23,892

minus $15,900 is $7,992 "Step three, multiply what is left by 15 percent. $7,992 times 0.15 is $1,199.

"Step four, subtract $300. $1199 minus $300 is $899.

Next week, Porch talks about Tax Form 1040.

Old-school video games coming back

By MICHAEL FELRERBAUM The Associated Press

RALEIGH N.C. - When Rob O'Hara needs a serious video game fix, he unwinds a black rubber joystick and plays a few rounds of "Space Invaders" on his Atari 2600, vintage 1982.

The 30-year-old networking engineer owns newer Xbox, PlayStation 2 and GameCube consoles, but for a true gaming geek like O'Hara, nothing tops the blocky graphics and simple sound effects of retro

"Playing games was a big part of my childhood, said the Yukon, Okla., man.

"Back then, it seems like games were more family-oriented and, as a result, families ended up playing a lot of games together." O'Hara is no relic in his love of 1980s electronic Vintage consoles are plentiful on Internet auction sites. An annual "Classic Gaming Expo" convention is growing, moving to larger quarters this year. And companies are trying to cash in with repackaged editions of classics including the space fighter "Defender" and the pill-munching "Pac-Man. Nintendo Co. recently released eight classic games for its portable Game Boy Advance, includ-ing "Super Mario Bros.," "The Legend of Zelda" and "Excitebike." Along with the $20-apiece games, the company also released a $100 Game Boy Advance system styled after its original Nintendo Entertain-

Jakks Pacific, meanwhile, sells a line of retro video game systems from classic game companies such as Atari Namco Cancom and Activision The $20 battery-powered systems, first released two years ago, plug directly into televisions and resemble old-fashioned joysticks.

"Games like Pac-Man are still as compelling today as they were 30 years ago," said spokeswoman Genna Goldberg of the Malibu, Calif.-based company. "There is a big nostalgia value."

Retro video gaming has become something of a pop culture phenomenon lately, with video game music and themes featured in television commercials for Hummer and Saturn sport utility vehicles. A top 20 R&B hit, "Game Over (Flip)" by Lil' Flip features sound effects from "Pac-Man."

It's not just nostalgia that's fueling retro video interest, says O'Hara. He thinks the old games were simply more fun to play: "There's a phrase that's used a lot in marketing - 'easy to learn, hard to master' - that describes most classic video games.

Gamers itching to relive their Atari, Colecovision and Intellivision days can find plenty of systems for about $20 on Internet auction sites like eBay. Many video game stores sell refurbished models for a bit more, about $80.

You can even travel to game as a group. Last year's Classic Gaming Expo drew more than 1,400 attendees, and this year the August event is moving from Las Vegas to the convention center in San Jose, Calif., to accommodate larger crowds. Expo spokesman Jayson Hill says there's a whole generation of older gamers who trashed their systems when they were kids. Now, they're feeling nostalgic and have some money to spend.

"There was a time when you could walk into any thrift store and pick up a game cartridge for 50 cents and systems for a couple of dollars," Hill said. Those days are gone. Many who go back and play the older games are often surprised, however, at the crudeness of the graphics, said Steven L. Kent, author of "The Ultimate History of Video Games. "A lot of people look back on old games like a kind of Camelot. Only when you do, you see that the castle smelled, the food was rancid and the maidens were bloated."

Boeing considers new ways to refuel tankers

SEATTLE - Boeing Co. is exploring ways to make refueling tankers for the Air Force less ex pensive, the head of the compa-nv's defense business said, as Boeing looks to make the scandal-plagued program more attractive to the government. The internal discussions come as the company awaits the re sults of two new studies examining whether the deal to supply tankers based on Boeing's 76 commercial jet should move forward at all. A previous study found that the program should not proceed until significant changes are made in the deal's terms and cost.

Jim Albaugh, president and CEO of St. Louis-based Boeing Integrated Defense Systems, said one possibility involves modifying the 767 while it is on the commercial assembly line, rath-er than after it is finished, to save time and money.

A similar proposal helped the company this month, when it won a $3.89 billion contract to develop a long-range patrol plane

Unsettling insurance score

O: My question deals with insurance scores. As you know, many insurance companies use credit information to determine the premiums they charge.

My insurer has told me that my score is 724, which gives me a 28 percent discount on the stan-dard premium. The maximum you can apparently achieve is a 35 percent discount if you have a score of 800 and above

I know if you apply for a mortgage, a credit score in excess of 720 typically gives you the best rate possible. Why is this not so with an insurance score? And how can I improve my score?

A: Credit scores and insurance scores are both based on the information in your credit reports, including your payment history, the number and type of accounts you have and how much of your avail-able credit you're using.

The weight of each of these factors might differ. For example, the insurance scoring formula sold by Fair Isaac Co. gives slightly more weight to payment history than does the company's FICO credit score, which typically is used by retailers and mortgage

Another difference is that there is far more variation among insurers in how they use credit informa-tion. Although Fair Isaac's FICO credit score is the gold standard in the lending industry, the company doesn't dominate insurance scor ing in the same way. Many leading insurers have their own custom in surance scores.

Although a 724 would be a good FICO credit score, it might be only fair to middling on the scale d by your insurance company You can ask your insurer if it's willing to reveal ways you could boost your score. If that doesn't work, you'll have to rely on the old credit standbys, including paying all your bills on time, not run-ning up big balances on your credit cards, paying down the debt you owe and not applying for credit you don't need Q: I know that it is a good idea to pay extra on your mortgage because over time you will pay off the loan sooner and save a lot of money on the interest. But what if you are planning to sell vour house relatively soon, say within three to four years? Is still worth it? We owe about $138,000 on the house. We are contributing the maximum on our Roth IRAs but not saving any other money except the $150 per month that is deducted from my husband's paycheck for his 403(b) workplace retirement plan

Because of medical reasons, my husband hopes to retire in about four years, at 60, with a pension. At that point we plan to sell our house and move into a smaller one. Would paying extra on the principal be a good idea in our situation? A: Let's challenge your first as sumption. In fact, it might not be a good idea to pay extra on your mortgage, at least until all your other financial ducks are in a row.

Too many people are making extra payments on their low-rate tax-deductible mortgages while carrying credit card debt, student loans and auto loans. Those non-mortgage debts should be retired long before vou consider prepaying your mortgage.

You also should be taking maximum advantage of your retirement savings opportunities and making sure you have an adequate emergency fund. Early retirees need to think about building up a particularly large stash, because they typically have to cover all their own health insurance costs until Medicare kicks in at age 65.

If you've taken care of your other financial needs and still want to prepay your mortgage, there's nothing stopping you. But if you sell your house before you pay off the loan, you won't be saving yourself much interest on a fixed-rate loan.

You will be building up more equity, though, which can be used to reduce the mortgage vou'll need on your next home

Making the 'binnacle list'

I was in the Navy for more than 20 years. It was common naval practice to use the expression "binnacle list" for the sick list, and I always wondered why.

As with many military terms that are often based on tradition, the "binnacle list" derives its name from a once common nautical practice.

As you point out. "binnacle list" as you point out, of minace list contains the names of personnel excused from duty because of illness or injury. The list is compiled daily to inform the officer in charge about the health status of the crew.

The "binnacle list" gets its name from the old practice of posting the sick list on the binnacle every morning. For the benefit of those readers who are unfamiliar with nautical terms, a binnacle is a stand or support for the ship's compass. Long ago it was a wooden structure mounted in a location where the helmsman could see it easily. Placing the list on the binnacle was a convenient method of making the information readily available to the captain. Hence, the sick list became known as the mount of the control of the sick list became known as the political po

Dear Annie: I have been seeing a married man for two years. When we first got together, "Boyd" told me the spark in his marriage just wasn't there relationship, Boyd admitted he was still seeing the O.W., so I ended things immediately. Two months later, he wanted me back, and I gave in I missed him, and I care for him so much. Since then, I have asked him a number of times if he is seeing anyone else and his answer is always no.

Boyd and I work together, and I see him drive into the office parking lot every morning. He is always on his cell phone talking to someone. I know it isn't his wife, because she's at home and he just saw her. I have a gut feeling that he is still involved with the O.W., but I'm not sure.

Since my husband and the mother of the bride are divorced, I think the cost of the wedding should be divided equally between the two of them. Also, the bride is 25 years old, and the couple has been living together. It seems reasonable to expect the newly engaged couple to contribute to the wedding expenses.

Handwritten Bible has modern touches

Eight-year, $4 million project aims to produce a book for the ages

The Associated Press

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. s Donald Jackson and his scribes worked on a handwritten and "illuminated" Bible, they used an image unavailable to the monks of the Middle Ages: a view of Earth taken from outer space

It's one of the many modern touches in the St. John's Bible, from using computers to lay out pages to using "virtual voice prints" of chanting monks, Buddhists and American Indians in several artworks

"It's a work of art and spirituality for the new millennium. It's not a 12th century Bible," Tim Ternes, director of public pro grams and education for the St. John's Bible, says. "It's very modern.

But this Bible — believed to be the first of its kind commissioned by a Benedictine monastery in 500 years - is still done the old-fashioned way, with every letter and il-lustration painstakingly drawn by hand.

Jackson and his team of artists in Monmouth, Wales, use quills cut from goose or swan feathers. Ancient inks are prepared using the volks of eggs from free-range chickens near Jackson's scriptorium as a binder. The words are written on large sheets of prepared vellum, or calfskin, which are then illuminated, or brought to light, with gold, silver or platinum to form dazzling artwork

"People just open a page and tears come into their eyes," Jackson says. The eight-year, $4 million project funded by private donations has reached the halfway point. Jackson and his artists have completed three volumes and have four to go. About 70 percent of the text has been written, and 40 percent to 45 percent of the illustrations are done

When the Bible is finished, expected in 2007, the massive work will total about 1,150 pages. When open, the facing pages measure about 3 feet wide by 2 feet tall. Each volume will be bound separately and have a cover of white oak from Wales

Ternes says the St. John's Bible stored in special cases in a vault at St. John's University, about 70 miles north-west of Minneapolis — is intended for the

An illustration for the Gospel According to Matthew illumines a page from The St. John's Bible, commissioned by St. John's Abbey and University in Collegeville, Minn. The Bible, believed to be the first of its kind commissioned by a Benedictine monastery in 500 vears, was done the old-fashioned way, with every letter and illustration drawn by hand.

"It's being designed to last 4,000 years, he says. The university hopes to eventually construct a building on campus to house the Rible

St. John's Abbey, one of the largest Benedictine monasteries in the world with about 200 monks, and St. John's University, founded by the abbey in 1857, commissioned Jackson in 1998 to create the St. John's Rible to celebrate the new millennium and the 150th anniversary of the monks' arrival, Ternes says. Jackson, 66, who lettered official state documents as a scribe to Queen Elizabeth's Crown Office at the House of Lords, told Barbara Walters in a 1970 interview that he'd like to write the Bible someday. He has called it his Sistine Chapel.

Eventually, Jackson asked St. John's sponsor of a well-known calligraphy conference he had attended several times -"Do you want this?" The Benedictines whose order was founded in Italy by St. Benedict about A.D. 530, have a long tradition of manuscript sharing and preservation. St. John's agreed to the project, and the first words were written on Ash Wednesday 2000.

Writing the Bible is a demanding physical task, Jackson says. The most anyone can work is 5½ hours a day; lettering one page takes between seven and 11 hours. "You can't sit and say, 'Oh, a page a

" he says The seven volumes are being done out of order, but eventually will be arranged in the order of a Roman Catholic Bible. The finished version will include the Apocrypha, the books that Protestants don't view as divinely inspired Scripture.

Gospel and Acts was the first volume completed, in May 2002. The Pentateuch. the first five books of the Bible and the same as the Jewish Torah, was completed in August 2003. Psalms was finished this April, and Jackson is working on the next volume, Prophets, due next February

(To mark the project's halfway point, a delegation — including Abbot John Klas-sen of St. John's Abbey, President Dietrich Reinhart of St. John's University and Jackson - presented Pope John Paul II with a limited edition, full-size reproduction of Gospel and Acts last month.)

The text of The New Revised Standard Version of the Bible, a modern English translation, is the version being used. Its predecessor, The Revised Standard Ver-sion, was authorized for use by Protestant, Anglican, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches. Its language is gender-inclusive when referring to men and women.

At St. John's, a committee on illumination and text meets to discuss biblical interpretations. A mix of theologians and artists, the committee forwards its reflections to Jackson, who creates sketches and mock-ups of pages that are e-mailed back to the committee.

"One of the first things the committee said was we don't want an illustrated Bible. We don't want pictures of the life of Jesus or Moses tapping the rock or Adam eating the apple." Brother Alan Reed, a committee member, says.

Jackson, who was raised Methodist, and his team have responded with a beautiful vision that runs from Greek iconography and Jewish and Islamic symbols to star tling modern images, such as a seven-panel Creation that includes a painting from a satellite view of the delta of the Ganges River.

The last image in Gospel is a view of the universe taken from the Hubble Space Telescope. To illustrate forgiveness, the parable of the Prodigal Son incorporates an image of the Twin Towers. Jackson says using an image from the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks is apt.

Everybody felt that rage on 9/11," he "but on the other hand, when you read the story in the Bible, it's telling you you can't hate your way out of anything. You've got to love your way out.

Branch Davidians are fearful end may be coming for sect

BY HOWARD WITT Chicago Tribune

WACO, Texas - The faithful gather every Saturday, the day they keep as Sabbath, waiting for their Messiah to return to the scene of his immolation here in a weedy field they call Mount Carmel

They've been waiting for 11 years now, and they vow to go on waiting for as long as it takes until David Koresh comes back to lead them to the promised land

There aren't many Branch Davidians left, their numbers having dwindled over the years due to death and dispersal and disillusion

Only a half dozen show up for the Saturday prayers; another 20 or so less fervent believers are thought to live in the area.

But most religious cults do not survive the deaths of their charismatic leaders so the remaining Branch Davidians count themselves blessed to have endured this long, especially considering the apocalyptic way so many of their relatives and friends died here on April 19, 1993.

On that infamous date, more than 70 Branch Davidians, 21 of them children, died in an explosive fire that culminated a violent 51-day standoff with the FBI. The siege had begun with a botched federal raid on the group's compound to search for illegal weapons.

"Our hopes are that God will intervene prior to the rest of us dying," said Clive Doyle, caretaker of the Mount Carmel site and the keeper of the flickering Branch Davidian flame

"But we do have to face facts: Eventually everyone gets old and dies. We worry that we will go the way of the Shakers and other groups that didn't get new members or have children.

There's not much left of the barn-like dormitory compound where the Branch Davidians made their last stand. Just some chunks of concrete foundation, a flooded cellar and an old swimming pool half-filled with black Branch Davidian Clive Doyle, who survived the 1993 shootout and fire at the Branch Davidian compound near Waco, Texas, walks in front of a church that is on the site of the former compound.

A small chapel was erected on the site a few years ago in com-memoration, and there is another outbuilding nearby that serves as a makeshift museum with artifacts from the siege, next to a trailer home where Dovle lives.

Test of mettle for America's golden girl

Jones' newest challenge is saving her reputation

BY ROB GLOSTER

he was the darling of the 2000 Sydney Olympics, capturing five medals and a pocketful of endorsements. Her quest for more gold this summer, barely a year after having a baby with the world's fastest man, was sure to be the feel-good story of the Athens Games.

Life seemingly could not have been better for Marion Jones.

Then the BALCO steroid scandal unfolded

Now she's being investigated for possible doping violations. Her reputation and her career are threatened. Her boyfriend could face a lifetime ban for alleged drug use, her ex-husband and ex-coach are talking to the feds

And she could do no better than fifth in the 100 meters - an event she once dominated, capturing Olympic gold and two world titles — in her last meet before the U.S. Olympic trials How could it have all gone so wrong for America's golden girl? Instead of focusing on her quest for more medals this summer, she's struggling just to protect her chance of making the U.S. Olympic team - and battling to clear her name

"I am fighting to preserve something that is price-less ... my reputation," Jones said this week in an e-mail interview with The Associated Press. "There are other Olympic Games. I only have one reputation, and that is what I am fighting to preserve

Jones repeatedly has denied ever using prohibited drugs, and points out she has passed 160 doping tests But that no longer is enough — the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency is using documents and other circumstantial evidence from the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative case to go after athletes on doping charges

Though Jones has not been formally notified she is the target of a USADA probe, she remains under investigation. She met with USADA officials in May, and answered follow-up questions from the agency this month

"Imagine someone questioning all of the hard work that you've done in your life. Imagine that. It's difficult," Jones said during a news conference last week in San Francisco. "My name is the one being questioned. My reputation, my career.

It wasn't supposed to be like this.

After winning three gold medals in Sydney, Jones was named the AP Female Athlete of the Year for 2000. She starred in ads for companies such as American Express and Nike. She was track and field's biggest star, and one of the world's most popular athletes

Even her personal life seemed to be following a Hollywood script. After divorcing surly shot putter C.J. Hunter, who retired in 2000 after four positive drug tests, Jones started dating training partner Tim Montgomery. He ran his fastest time wearing her shoes, and then broke the world record using her starting blocks.

Shortly after giving birth to their child in June 2003, Jones announced she was coming back for the 2004 Summer Games — and within six weeks, she was at her racing weight.

But there already had been troubling signs. Jones and Montgomery had an acrimonious split with coach Trevor Graham in the winter of 2003, and for a short time they worked with disgraced coach Charlie Francis - who supplied steroids to Ben Johnson in the 1980s

Jones and Montgomery both testified last fall before a grand jury probing BALCO, but the focus at first was on baseball players like Barry Bonds and Jason Giambi. Jones and Montgomery said their re-lationship with BALCO founder Victor Conte, one of four men indicted on charges of distributing steroids to top athletes, was minimal

The spotlight has turned to track and field, though, as the U.S. Olympic trials and the Athens Games approach. Montgomery is one of four sprinters facing drug charges, and a possible lifetime ban, based on evidence from the BALCO case. He says he has never used drugs and has done nothing wrong. In recent weeks, Jones has taken the offensive in her battle with USADA. During the news conference in San Francisco, she defiantly accused the anti-doping agency of being a "kangaroo court" and demanded a public hearing. She offered to provide her grand jury testimony to USADA, and took a lie detector test to bolster her claim she has been drug-free.

The bubbly and media-sayyy Jones remains exemely popular.

On the day before last weekend's Prefontaine Clas sic in Eugene, Ore., the line of fans waiting to get Jones' autograph extended out the door of a Nike

And some newspaper columnists have come to her defense, saying she is being unfairly targeted and accusing USADA of everything from McCarthyism to conducting a witch hunt, USADA maintains it is merely following the anti-doping rules endorsed by athletes

Jones said in the e-mail interview that her current sponsors "have been totally supportive. They believe in me, they know I am drug-free, and they are steadfast with their support. But she might be losing other endorsement chanc-

Paul Swangard, managing director of the Warsaw Sports Marketing Center at the University of Oregon, says corporations are leery of athletes tainted by drug allegations or other legal problems.

'She may still have more friends than enemies, but there's a big difference between what the impact is on her general appeal and whether businesses would want to attach themselves to her," Swangard said.

The skirmishes with USADA have been a constant distraction as Jones prepares for what she hopes will be another run toward five Olympic gold medals. She's in limbo, facing no charges at this point but knowing USADA could be building a case that might keep her out of the Aug. 13-29 Olympics.

Though she refused to blame her fifth-place finish in the Prefontaine meet on such distractions, she repeatedly has accused USADA of dragging out her

Her son, Monty, turns 1 on Monday, Jones says motherhood solidified her desire to compete until the Beijing Olympics in four years.

"Monty and my family are the most important things to me now, and they have provided me strength during the current situation. I know that no matter what happens, when I come Monty and my family are and will always be there for me. no matter what," she said in the e-mail.

"My plans have not changed. I will be there in Beijing in 2008. In fact, Monty will be 5 years old in 2008 and I can't wait for him to see his mom com-

Hazy standards supplying a cloud of controversy

et's say a sprinter who loses to the same opponent over and over suspects his competitor is performance-enhancing drugs.

So instead of training harder and smarter, he decides to go on the juice himself to make up the difference

That would be cheating. Everybody is clear about that. Less clear is whether the U.S.

Anti-Doping Agency is applying the same standards of fairness it expects athletes to meet USADA officials have believed for some time that a number of American track and field athletes were using performance-enhancers and yet managing somehow to avoid detection through drug

Unable to complete the tough expensive, time-consuming work required to develop a better testing system, the agency instead was able to adopt a lower standard of proof just in time to make use of evidence that came in through the door as a result of the federal investigation into BALCO The timing looks suspicious, but it's not. A March 1 decision by the International Association of Athletics Federations, the ruling body for track and field, enabled USADA to similarly change its previous standard of proving guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt" to proving guilt to the "comfortable satisfaction" of the panel hearing an athlete's case.

The "comfortable satisfaction" standard has been part of the World Anti-Doping Agency's code for over a year. It also has been used by the Swiss-based Court of Arbitration for Sport in dozens of doping cases as far back as the 1996 Atlanta Olympics, and is applied regularly in the United States in professional misconduct cases, such as those involving doctors and lawyers.

Attorneys for some of the athletes under investigation are preparing to challenge the changed standard and whether it should apply to cases where the eviwas gathered before March 1. But their chances of prevailing are slim, and slimmer still could be their chances of winning in the court of public opinion.

However the legal arguments turn out, supporters of USADA's suddenly beefed-up enforcement tools contend they're the only way to change an athletic culture increasingly obsessed with performance and peopled by competitors willing to risk anything and everything to gain an edge. They also argue such efforts are the only way to disperse the cloud of suspicion that hovers over all those athletes who compete fairly and honestly.

"Are we moving beyond our comfort level? Probably. Are we looking at solutions that might looking at solutions that might cause some rumbling in our guts? I guess so," said Bill Martin, who guided the U.S. Olympic Commit-tee through a series of administra-reforms before stepping down recently as the organization's president.

ing that we send a clean team to the Summer

Nobody disputes that end, only some of the means by which USADA intends to accomplish it. The agency cut some corners when it took possession of evidence gathered by the Justice Department in the BALCO investigation — a move legal scholars called almost unprecedented. And more troubling still is that none of the officials involved has laid out clearly what standards will be applied to the evidence that's being used to build cases against athletes

Presented with such evidence, sprinter Kelli White agreed last month to accept a two-year ban for using performance-enhancers and agreed to help USADA unmask other cheaters. Since then, four other U.S. track and field athletes - 100-meter world record Montgomery, Tim Michelle Collins, Alvin Harrison and Chryste Gaines - have been accused by USADA of steroid use.

Two sources familiar with the letter sent to Montgomery who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press that USADA informed Montgomery that it is seeking to ban him from the sport for the rest of his life. His lawyer accused the agency of resorting to "McCarthy-like tactics." While such comparisons sound overblown at the moment, let's hope they don't turn out to be premature instead.

White's promise to cooperate with investigators - "If I can make a difference in cleaning up the sport," she said, "I will have done more for the sport than anything I could have done on the - already prompted many of her fellow competitors to start looking over their shoulders. Montgomery has been a fixture in track and field circles longer and, as a result, he's developed more and sharper rivalries. He's also the companion of three-time gold medalist Marion Jones, who is under investigation by USADA but has not been accused of any

If USADA can make good on its threat, it doesn't require much imagination to come up with a list of questions agency officials might want answered in exchange for leniency.

Tougher to imagine is how the atmosphere surrounding the sport can get any more poisonous, but just wait.

Another Wimbledon washout

Rainout erases break in fortnight; Ivanisevic retires

BY STEPHEN WILSON The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Wimbledon organizers scheduled play on the middle Sunday for only the third time in the tournament's 127-year history after rain washed out all matches for the second time this week.

After Saturday's rainout, All England Club chief executive Christopher Gorringe announced that matches will be held Sunday—traditionally a rest day in the two-week championships—to reduce the backlog.

The last time that happened was 1997, after no matches were played on the Thursday and Friday of the first week because of rain. The only other time matches were held on the middle Sunday was 1901

"Ultimately, it's the club that makes the decision, but obviously we need to work with a lot of key people like the police and like the local authority." Gorringe said. "It's obviously a huge inconvenience for a lot of people."

Rain delayed play on Monday and Tuesday, and all matches were wiped out Wednesday in the first Wimbledon washout since 1997.

"We know the neighbors are not keen on us playing on the middle Sunday," Gorringe said. "We realize we live in a residential area. This is something which we... have never wanted to do, but we're having to do it in order to try to conclude the championships on schedule, which is our main aim."

The decision clears the way for another so-called "People's Sunday" — with Wimbledon packed with thousands of fans who wouldn't usually have access to tickets. Prices are $64 for tickets at Centre Court, $55 for Court 1 and $27 for the outside courts.

The second rainout in a week forced Wimbledon officials to schedule play in the middle Sunday of the event for only the third time in the tournament's 127-year history. The last time it happened was 1997.

"I think it's good for Wimbledon because it so often brings a different type of person to the championships, which is good," Gorringe said. "The experiences which we've had in the past have been very, very good. It should be very interesting and a good day tomorrow. Much vounser."

On Friday, Goran Ivanisevic ended his colorful 15-year career on the same court where he won his only Grand Slam title as an unseeded wild card in 2001, beating Pat Rafter in a dramatic five-set Monday final.

Ivanisevic, who missed Wimbledon the past two years because of injuries, walked off Centre Court for the last time to a standing ovation after losing in straight sets to 2002 champion Llevton Hewitt

"I still don't believe it's over, but I couldn't pick a better place, a better court," the 32-year-old Croat said after the third-round defeat.

Elsewhere, Andy Roddick and two-time defending champion Serena Williams won in straight sets, while French Open champion Ser-Rodding Myskina and men's French Open runner-up Guillermo Coria were upset. Second-seeded Myskina was eliminated 4-6, 46-40 y Amy Frazier and No. 3 Coria lost to Germany's Florian Mayer 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Ivanisevic was unable to defend his title in 2002 after undergoing surgery on his left shoulder and withdrew in 2003 after a knee injury. He struggled to get back this year for a 15th and final appearance. Even a one-sided 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 loss didn't dampen the moment

"It was a victory for me to come here, play two matches and lose to a guy who is a Wimbledon champion," Ivanisevic said. "Everything was perfect—the weather, the crowd, the court. I just enjoyed myself."

The capacity crowd gave Ivanisevic a two-minute ovation. He soaked in the applause, saluted the fans and, at one point, took a long look around the arena.

"I focus on every inch of this court," he said. "I have great memories of this court and some bad memories. I lost three finals, but I think the last one was the best one."

Ivanisevic slipped on a No. 10 Croatian soccer shirt, drawing good-natured boos from the English fans, still smarting from their national team's quarterfinal elimination by Portugal in the Euro 2004 championship. But the cheers returned as Ivanisevic left the court for the last time

"I'm going to miss everything."
he said. "I'm going to miss the guys that I spent so many years with. I'm going to miss serving ac on 15-40, 30-40. I'm going to miss talking to the umpire, sometimes bad, sometimes good. I'm going to miss waiting for the rain to stop."
But he's also looking forward to

"No more painkillers, no more practicing, no more exercising," he said. "I just want to enjoy and be proud of myself, everything I did in the last 15 years."

taking it easy.

Ivanisevic, who made his first appearance here in 1988, lost in the finals in 1992 (Andre Agassi), 1994 (Pete Sampras) and 1998 (Sampras). Then, ranked No. 125, he came out of nowhere in 2001 to become the first wild card to win a Grand Slam title.

TPC champ Scott leads Booz Allen

POTOMAC, Md. — Records continue to fall in the Booz Allen Classic, in which a day and a half of perfect conditions and impeccable greens helped Adam Scott post a 14-under-par score after two rounds.

Scott's 128 total bettered the 36-hole course record of 130 set by Fred Funk in 1998. Scott's bogey-free round of 62 on Friday included nine birdies, and he paused more than once trying to remember them all.

RALEIGH, N.C. — Alexander Ovechkin became the second Russian player selected first in the NHL Draft when he was picked by the Washington Capitals on Saturday.

Ovechkin, 18, was the top-rated European skater by the NHL's Central Scouting department. He was praised by scouts for his speed, size and stickhandling as well as his willingness to play physically and de-

Washington earned the right to the top pick by winning the draft lottery following the regular season. After entertaining as many as 15 trade offers by clubs looking to move up to No. 1, the Capitals decided the best move was to draft Ovechkin.

"Ovechkin has always been number one," Capitals General Manager George McPhee said. "We could have done a trade for volume, but none of those players would have been as good as this guy."

He and Ilya Kovalchuk are the only Russian players to be chosen with the first pick. Kovalchuk, who tied for the NHL goal lead this season with 41, was picked by Atlanta in 2001.

"I'm very happy," Ovechkin said.

In 53 games last season for Moscow Dynamo, Ovechkin had 23 points (13 goals, 10 assists). His father, Mikhail, is a former professional soccer player and his mother, Tatiana, won Olympic gold medals in basketball in 1976 and 1980.

The Pittsburgh Penguins made it 1-2 for Russian players when they selected forward Yevgeny Malkin with the second pick. The 17-year-old forward had three goals and nine assists last season for Magnitogorsk. Chicaso chose the first North American.

top-ranked defenseman Cam Barker of Canada, with the third pick. Barker, 18, had 21 goals and 44 assists last season for Medicine Hat of the World Hockey League and was captain of Canada's under-18 national team

He has drawn comparisons to New Jersey All-Star Scott Stevens, a hard hitter.

"I know Scott Stevens is a great player," Barker said. "To even be mentioned in the same sentence is a great honor."

Carolina traded up with Columbus to the fourth spot to choose left wing Andrew Ladd, the top-ranked North American skarer. Ladd, 18, had 30 goals and 45 assists last season for the WHL's Calgary Hitmen. The Hurricanes gave their eighth and 59th spots in the first round to the Blue Jackets, prompting prolonged cheers from the near-full house at the RBC Center.

Last year, they got Eric Staal — also the top-rated North American skater — with the second overall pick.

Phoenix chose the first U.S. player with the No. 5 pick, taking Blake Wheeler of Minnesota. The right wing, ranked 17th among North American skaters, had 45 goals and 55 assists for Breck School last season.

The high school junior was projected to go late in the first round.

The New York Rangers took the draft's top-ranked goaltender, Al Montoya of the University of Michigan, with the sixth pick.

Bumpy road leads J. Gordon to pole

The Associated Press

SONOMA, Calif. - Jeff Gordon could hardly believe it. After an unusually aggressive qualifying lap Friday at Infineon

Raceway, the four-time NASCAR champion found himself on the pole for the Nextel Cup race on

"I felt like I left the door wide open for some of those guys to put us back a few spots," Gordon said.

His lap included a trip through the dirt in Turn 2, bouncing over numerous curbs and nearly banging off the concrete wall on the outside of the final turn on the

1.99-mile, 10-turn road course. "We're on a mission," Gordon said. "We're not happy with the way things have been going for us lately and all we can do is attack, attack, attack,

The Chevy driver took his second pole in a row, third of the season and 49th of his career with a time of 1 minute, 15.968 seconds breaking the record of 1:16.522 set last year by road-racing spe-cialist Boris Said. Gordon's speed was 94,303 mph.

Gordon, the 10th of 42 drivers who made qualifying attempts for the Dodge/Save Mart 350, chalked up the record to the newly repayed track and a new tire from Goodyear. But he was surprised nobody was able to wasn't very pretty.

"I got off the track a little bit over there in turn two," Gordon said. "I can't seem to get away from that spot on the racetrack That's the same thing we did last year, just not quite as far off the

"When I saw [Gordon] go off course over there. I thought I could beat that," Wallace said. "I thought I threw a pole away with that one. I didn't have any problem, but I looked down and thought I had the emergency brake on. I just thought the car had a lot more in it."

Gordon waited nervously for other contenders, including Said, defending race winner Robby Gordon, Ricky Rudd and Tony Stewart to take their shot.

Jeff Gordon said he told crew chief Robbie Loomis, "I can't be-lieve we're going to get this pole." But all of them had problems, with Rudd qualifying 12th, Stew-art 17th, Said 19th and the other

Gordon 24th.

Williamses, Roddick to play in Olympics

WIMBLEDON, England - Serena and Venus Williams, Martina Navratilova, Jennifer Capriati and Andy Roddick head the U.S. Olympic tennis teams that were announced Saturday at Wimble-

Navratilova will be making her Olympic debut at 47, while Ca priati will represent the United States in international team competition for the first time since a falling out with former Fed Cup captain Billie Jean King in April

The Williams sisters won the women's doubles in the 2000 Sydney Games, and Venus won the singles gold. They'll play singles and doubles in the Aug. 13-29 Athens Olympics, Capriati and Chanda Rubin will play singles, while Navratilova and Lisa Raymond will be the other doubles team.

Roddick, the U.S. Open champion who's ranked No. 2, will be joined on the men's squad by No. 20 Mardy Fish, No. 30 Vince Spadea and No. 31 Taylor Dent in singles, plus the top-ranked doubles team of twins Bob and Mike Roddick and Fish will play doubles together.

"We are very pleased with the level of improvement that has been achieved so far, which has led us to be 90 percent ready and more." Voulgarakis said.

Athens will deploy 70,000 po-lice and soldiers while also receiving help from NATO.

Judge orders probe into leaks of BALCO testimony

SAN FRANCISCO - A judge on Friday ordered federal prosecutors to investigate whether the government leaked grand jury transcripts in which sprinter Tim Montgomery testified he used performance-enhancing drugs.

U.S. District Judge Susan Illston, presiding over the case of four men accused of distributing steroids, demanded that the men's defense attorneys and their clients also sign sworn declarations that they did not illegally release the transcripts to the San Francisco Chronicle, which published some of Montgomery's testimony Thursday.
"I'm curious to know how that

Texans, LB Babin agree to multiyear deal

HOUSTON - The Houston Texans have agreed to terms with first-round pick Jason Babin, signing the linebacker out of Western Michigan to a multiyear deal.

Babin is the first first-round pick to agree to terms with an NFL team, the second time in three seasons the Texans have been the first team in the league to lock up a first-round pick. Financial terms weren't immediately available.

Babin, a 6-foot-2, 260-pounder who was a star defensive end at Western Michigan, has agreed to a six-vear contract, a league source said Saturday.

Harding takes pounding in boxing ring

EDMONTON Alberta Tonya Harding's new career as a boxer took a severe beating Friday, along with her face, as she was knocked out by Amy Johnson.

fans booed Boxing self-styled spitfire of U.S. sports when she entered the ring and leapt to their feet cheering as she was pummeled bv 22-year-old Johnson.

Harding, 33, of Portland, Ore., was hoping to use Friday's bout as a launching pad for a big money title fight after trading in her figure skates for boxing gloves two years ago. But that dream took a bruising in the third round when she was pushed up against the ropes by Johnson and punched repeatedly in the face. The fight was stopped at 1:04 of the round.

Bryant trial to begin on Aug. 27

The Associated Press

EAGLE, Colorado — The sexual assault trial of NBA All-Star Kobe Bryant will begin Aug. 27, more than a year after he was accused of raping a 19-year-old woman.

The trial date was set Friday by Judge Terry Ruckriegle. It is expected to last three to four weeks, including the process of questioning and choosing jurors.

Bryant, 25, has pleaded not guilty, saying he had consensual sex with the woman at a Vail-area resort June 30, 2003. If convicted, the Los Angeles Lakers star faces four years to life in prison or 20 years to life on probation.

Earlier in the day, the major issue in the case revolved around transcripts of a closed-door hearing in the case, accidentally released to the media by a court reporter which set off a battle between the judge and media organizations that received the documents.

Ruckriegle issued an order late Thursday threatening contempo of court if the material was published. The news organizations that received the transcripts, including The Associated Press, contended the order was unconstitutional, but none immediately reported on any of the material. The organizations said they will appeal the order to the Colorado Supreme Court on Monday.

The transcripts were from a two-day closed-door hearing earlier this week that dealt primarily with witness testimony and evidence on the accuser's sex life.

Media attorney Tom Kelley noted that the media organizations had not sought the transcripts, which were sealed by the judge. In such cases, it is up to the organizations to decide whether to publish the material, not a judge or any other government official, he said.

"Regardless of what informamay be contained in this hearing transcript, and regardless of whether any individual media outlet ultimately decides to publish it, these members of the press seek to vindicate this fundamental principle, one that lies at the heart of our system of government," Kelley said.

The transcripts were of a hearing earlier this week.

The court reporter intended to e-mail them to the judge and other court staff, but accidentally used the wrong group of addresses, state courts spokeswoman Karen Salaz said.

Shortly after he learned of the mistake, Ruckriegle issued an order saying the transcripts were not for public dissemination and that any revelation of their contents could bring a contempt of court citation.

The judge had anticipated the order would be challenged, Salaz

The Orlando Magic took prep star Dwight Howard with the top pick and acquired No. 20 pick Jameer Nelson, above, in a trade with Denver.

Bulls, Magic still are top two

Chicago, Orlando score high marks for selections in NBA Draft

BY MARC NARDUCCI

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Another NBA Draft has been completed, and grading the teams has become more difficult. That's because, with eight high school first-rounders and other unknown quantities, even many of the teams aren't really sure what they have. Still, it's possible to offer an initial evaluation:

The big winners

Chicago. Ben Gordon may not be a pure point guard, but with Kirk Hinrich also in the back-court, maybe he can play the off-guard despite his heighty-er who will be able to score. Lud Deng has been described as a potential Scottie Pippen-type play-er, one who will give the Bulls in telligence and better-than-expect-ed athletic ability at the small-for-ed athletic ability at the small-forward spot.

Orlando. Depending on whom the Magic receive for disgruntled Tracy McGrady, they might be a competitive team next season even with Johnny Davis as their coach. Top pick Dwight Howard isn't ready to be an NBA star but should contribute as a rookie. Jameer Nelson could see immediate time at point guard unless Steve Francis or some other big-name point guard is acquired for McGrady. Brazilian forward Anderson Varejao was considered a first-round talent, but Orlando got him with the first pick of the second round. In all, Orlando made some serious progress in the draft

Analysis

Washington. For a team that traded its first-round pick, the Wizards made great improvement. Antawn Jamison, whom the Wizards acquired from Dalas, will give them a serious offensive option. Plus, they were able to rid themselves of Jerry Stackhouse and Christian Laettner. That is addition by subtraction. Surrendering the No. 5 pick in the deal with Dallas was difficult, but apply the support of the property of Charlotte. Any first-year expansion team that can get a character and high-quality player such as Emeka Okafor to build around is on the right track.

To be determined

Dallas. The Mavericks didn't own a first-round pick at the beginning of the week but ended up with two of them. They took point guard Devin Harris with the pick they gof from Washington and acquired the No. 21 pick, 7-5 center Pavel Podkolzine, from Utah. Of course, they are trying to get Shaquille O'Neal, so those guys may not be Mays for very long.

76ers. Before everybody bashes the picking of a player who averaged just 12.9 points per game in college last season, remember that Andre Iguodala was expected by many to be drafted much higher than No. 9.

Few players in the draft are better athletes. The Sixers, who looked slow and tired last season, wanted to become more athletic. Plus, Iguodala is known as a tenacious defender, which makes him ideal for a Jim O'Brien-coached team. He has to work on his jumper, but he has a promising upside that may not be evident immediately, especially because he should be heading into his junior year at Arizona.

Biggest reach

Toronto. The Raptors took center Rafeal Arrujo with the No. 8 pick. The Brigham Young center and worked out for the Sixers, and O'Brien had talked about how he was far from becoming even a competent NBA-level defender. He also isn't overly uck. Some people suggested that he could have gone much lower in the draft, but Toronto didn't have a lower pick, and it liked him.

Biggest gambles

Portland. The Trail Blazers surprised many by taking high school point guard Sebastian Telfair with the No. 13 pick, especially with Jameer Nelson still on the board. Telfair is a high-risk, high-reward player who could be a future all-pro or a washout. The Blazers also selected Viktor Khryapa and Sergei Monia, apriof forwards who were teammates in Russia. Ampbody in the NBA who says he can predict how this draft will turn out for the Blazers is either lying or the smartest person in the league.

Seattle. The Sonics chose 7-foot high school center Robert Swift, whose stock went up although he refused to work out for teams before the draft. That's how crazy the NBA has become. It says here that workouts would have exposed him.

Wait and see

Boston. The Celtics had three first-round picks and chose high school forward Al Jefferson at No. 15, St. Joseph's guard Delonter West at No. 24 and Oklahoma State guard Tony Allen looked ordinary at the Chicago pre-draft champ, while West boyiously boosted his stock there. Celtics fans shouldn't look for immediate results.

All three players are works in progress with potential.

Utah. The Jazz added freshman forward Kris Humphries of Minnesota at No. 14 and shooting guard Kirk Snyder of Nevada at No. 16

Humphries can shoot, but there are questions about his athletic ability. Snyder is a great athlete who isn't known as a shooter. If they work on their weaknesses, they could become good players.

Underrated move

Phoenix traded the seventh pick to Chicago for a future first-rounder, cash considerations, and the Bulls' second-rounder. The second-rounder turned out to be Jackson Vroman, a 6-9 power forward whose motor is always running. He is somebody who should pick up the intensity level of the Suns.

Braves now looking up at most of NL East

Depleted Atlanta no longer looks like team that has been postseason fixture since 1991

By Peter Schmick

The Baltimore Sur

n the Atlanta Braves' new world, the postseason is no longer a foregone conclu-

They still own a string of playoff appearances that remains un broken to 1991, but they don't have Greg Maddux or Tom Glavine or any semblance of the starting rotation that once defined Atlanta as the pitching capital of the haseball world

They also entered the 2004 season without power-hitting catcher Javy Lopez and outfielder Gary Sheffield, who departed last winter in the organization's latest talent exodus.

"We saw them in spring training, and you could sense that there was a big difference," said New York Vankees manager Joe Torre, who played for the Brayes in the 1960s and managed the club from 1982 to 1984. "Their pitching has been their strength, and they didn't have the depth they had in the past.

"They had lost players before, but they had never really depleted their pitching."

The proof is in fourth place, where the Braves trail the Florida Marlins, Philadelphia Phillies and even the resurgent New York Mets in the once-comfy National League East. It is a far cry from their usual position at the top of the division, but Lopez, a Baltimore Orioles catcher, isn't ready to paint them out of the playoff picture just vet

"Even though they are not playing as well as they have played in the past." Lopez said, "they're still only a few games out of first place. That's nothing. They can win four in a row and the Marlins can lose four in a row and they would be right back up there."

True enough, but this is definitely not the same Braves team that reached the playoffs in every full season Lopez was the everyday catcher with Atlanta. The starting rotation that used to feature three of the best starters in the game entered Thursday night's series finale against the Florida Marlins without a pitcher with a winning record.

Russ Ortiz (6-6), John Thomson (5-6) and Jaret Wright (5-5) are holding together a rotation that expected more from Mike Hampton (1-7) and is awaiting the return of injured Horatio Ramirez. Some help has arrived in the form of right-hander Paul Byrd, who gave up just four hits in seven innings Saturday in his first major league start since undergoing Tommy John surgery on his elbow in July

The Braves gave up some pitching to acquire power-hitting out-fielder J.D. Drew from the St. Louis Cardinals, but that was not enough to offset the loss of Lopez (43 home runs) and Sheffield (39 homers, 132 RBIs) and the trou blesome hamstring injury that has allowed outfielder Chipper Jones to play in barely half the team's games so far

In addition, outfielder Andruw Jones missed last weekend with a twisted knee, and Lopez's replacement, promising catcher Johnny Estrada, has been hampered by a hamstring strain and a bruised

The only constant has been veteran closer John Smoltz, who has converted 11 of 12 save opportunities, but Lopez isn't ready to concede his former teammates will miss the postseason.

"It all depends on what kind of moves they make and what happens at the end of the season. Lopez said. "The Atlanta Braves used to leave the second-place team way behind. I don't know if they'll do that this year, but it doesn't matter. They've got some-... a chemistry. ... They thing

Royals pick up, move on without Beltran after trade

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - The day after the Kansas City Royals traded one of the finest players they ever developed, a handwritten message brought tears to manager Tony Pena Carlos Beltran, as he left the clubhouse for Houston, placed the note in Pena's office where he knew he would find it.

"He just said, 'Thanks for everything,' Pena said. "'For your help, and for the friendship. With all my heart, you are the best manager I ever played for. God bless you and your family."

It was, Pena said, "tough. Very tough." "Everybody wanted Carlos to stay here. I want Carlos to stay here," Pena said "The front office wanted Carlos to stay here, but sometimes it is out of our hands Replacing Beltran in center field was David DeJesus, who was brought up from Triple-A Omaha, where he was sent after going 1-for-23 in 11 big league games in April.

Baird is generally getting high marks for the trade, especially considering that everyone in baseball knew he planned to unload Beltran

The Royals last offered the smooth switch-hitter a contract "two Decembers ago," Baird said.

"We offered him a three-year deal and then had conversations with his agent, Scott Boras. From what they desired, it was not even close," Baird said.

"When things get to the extreme and you cannot make a deal, we can go ahead and make a nice offer that satisfies, I guess newspapers and fans and that kind of stuff. But we're lying to people.

"Bottom line, this was way out of our reach. Way out of our reach. Quite frankly, out of a lot of teams' reaches," he said.

Pena did not try to pretend the Royals had strengthened themselves. They went into Friday night's game with a 28-41 record, last in the AL Central.

"It's very tough for me to say if you're going to improve the team ... when you trade your best player and one of the best players in baseball," Pena said. "I think we improved getting young players for our organization. I think we improved for the future if they turn into players they should

Homer barrage proves Walker as good as ever

BY TOM WITHERS
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — On Larry Walker's previous visit to Jacobs Field, he participated in a home-run hitting contest.

He returned Friday night, and he's still swinging for the fences. Walker hit three home runs his last a two-run shot in the 10th inning— to power the Colorado Rockies to a 10-8 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Walker, playing in just his fourth game this season after being sidelined 68 games by a groin injury, drove the first pitch from former teammate Jose Jimenez (1-6) into the right-field seats.

Walker's laser shot into the lower right-field seats in the 10th scored Todd Helton, who led off with his third single.

Walker also connected for solo homers leading off the second and sixth innings for the Rockies, who trailed 5-2 after five before scoring six times in the sixth.

The 37-year-old Walker is 5-for-3 with three homers and eight RBIs in his career against Jimenez. The right-hander gave up two three-run homers to Walker the last time the Canadian outfielder hit three in a game, on April 28, 1999 in St. Louis.

Walker credited an adjustment he made during pregame batting practice with shaking some of the rust off his swing. Don't bother asking what change he made.

"It's a secret," he said with a smile. "I change things all the time."

Ben Broussard had five RBIs and Casey Blake homered for the Indians, who had won 12 straight weekend — Friday, Saturday and Sunday — home games.

Steve Reed (1-1) pitched a scoreless ninth, and Shawn Chacon worked a perfect 10th for his 16th save in 22 tries.

"I guess I like it here," Walker said. He wasn't thinking about a home run when he came up in the 10th. Sleep was on his mind. "Victor (Martinez) asked me how I was doing," Walker said, referring to the Indians catcher. "I said, 'I'm tired.' That's the longest game I've been in since September."

Walker led off the sixth with his second homer off the right-hander to make it 5-3, igniting a six-run outburst.

Boone, Tribe in tentative agreement on contract

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Free agent

third baseman Aaron Boone has reached a tentative agreement on a two-year contract with the Cleveland Indians, The Associated Press learned Friday.

Boone, whose 11th-inning homer in Game 7 of the AL championship series last season put the New York Yankees in the World Series, hasn't played since injuring his left knee during a pickup basketball game in January. The Indians, who outbid several other teams for Boone, plan to announce the Santiago to minors

SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners sent shortstop Ramon Santiago to Class AAA Tacoma on Friday and recalled left-hander Matt Thornton from the Rainiers. Santiago was hitting .143 with four RBIs in 10 games.

Stinnett faces surgery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Catcher Kelly Stinnett will have reconstructive elbow surgery and miss the rest of the season, the Kansas City Royals said Friday.

Stinnett, a nine-year veteran, was hitting .305 with three home runs and seven RBIs in 20 games for Kansas City.

Twins recall Romero

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Twins recalled left-handed reliever J.C. Romero from Class AAA Rochester on Friday and optioned infielder Alex Prieto to Rochester.

Romero was sent to Rochester on June 12 after struggling with a 5.70 ERA in 32 appearances with the Twins. He started three games and had a 2.25 ERA with Rochester.

Prieto saw limited duty, batting 250 in 13 games.

Pirates activate OF Davis

CINCINNATI — The Pittsburgh Pirates activated outfielder J.J. Davis from the 15-day disabled list Friday, and designated outfielder Ruben Mateo for assignment.

Davis was on the disabled list since May 19 with a sprained right pinkie. He hit .095 and drove in two runs in 16 games before his injury.

Mateo hit .242 with three homers and seven RBIs in 19 games with the Pirates.

Baseball confirms andro ban and testing

BY RONALD BLUM

PHILADELPHIA — Six years after Mark McGwire made andro famous during his 70-home run season, the steroid-like supplement has been banned by major league baseball and its players.

The ban, which began this season, was never announced by the commissioner's office or the players' union. Bob DuPuy, baseball's chief operating office, referred to it Friday in a panel discussion during the annual meeting of the Associated Press Sports Editors. "I think it's a good thing," New York Yankees pitcher Mike Mussina said later in the day. "It's still one of many things to be done."

The Pood and Drug Administration banned the sale of androstendione as of April 12. Baseball's decision, confirmed by management lawyer Frank Coonelly and union lawyer Michael Weiner, took effect the same day and means players who test positive for andro face penalties, including suspensions after two positive tests.

Coonelly and Weiner said that, based on the FDA decision and a study conducted by Harvard in 1999 that was financed by baseball, the union and management concluded andro acted like an androgenic anabolic steroid and should be added to the sport's list of banned substances.

Andro is used by the body to make testosterone. Congress is considering legislation that would designate andro and more than two dozen other steroid-like supplements as controlled substances — making them available by prescription only under certain conditions.

In survey tests for steroids last year, 5-7 percent of player samples were positive, triggering testing with penalties this year.

A first positive test would result in treatment, a second in a 15-day suspension or fine of up to $10,000. The length of suspensions would increase to 25 days for a third positive test, 50 days for a fourth and one year for a fifth. These suspensions also would be without pay.

"I think it's a good move, but I thought it was already done," the New York Mets' Todd Zeile said. "I thought they had done it the year after Mark McGwire in 1998,"

McGwire stopped taking andro the following year, saying he did not want kids to follow his lead.

"When they were making the big stink about McGwire, I didn't see what the big deal was," Baltimore player representative Jay Gibbons said. "You have to ban it now. Obviously, there's some concern if they took it off the shelves."

Also appearing on the panel were Dr. Gary Wadler, a member of the World Anti-Doping Agen-cy's medical research committee, former Pittsburgh Steeler Steve Courson, who has admitted using steroids; and Steve Holman, a former middle-distance runner who is an athlete ambassador for the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency. Courson referred to the investigation of BALCO, the California lab at the center of the federal probe Greg Anderson, trainer for San Francisco Glants slugger Barry Bonds, was among four men indicted by the grand jury. All have pleaded innocent, and Bonds has denied using illegal steroids.

Tim Montgomery, who testified before the grand jury, was one of several sprinters who received a letter Wednesday from USADA warning they could face punishment for alleged steroid use. Maring Jones, who won five medals in the Sydney Olympics, also is being investigated.

Jones and Montgomery have denied using prohibited drugs. Courson said it's a myth that there are "only a few bad apples."

"BALCO shows us that some of the people under suspicion are some of the greatest athletes in the world," he said. Courson said that if Montgomery is banned for ifie, "there are probably 100 sprinters waiting in line who are using the same drugs."

Devil Rays get back to .500

Brazelton flirts with no-hitter vs. Florida

The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Dewon Brazelton savored the moment rather than look back

A year ago Friday, the highly regarded Tampa Bay prospect was demoted from the majors all the way to Class A Bakersfield. On Friday, the young pitcher flirted with a no-hitter in a performance that suggests his career is back on track. Brazelton held the Florida Marlins hit-less until Mike Lowell doubled with two outs in the eighth inning Friday night and the surging Devil Rays beat the defending World Series champions 2-0 for their 12th straight interleague victory. "What happened last year, happened last year," Brazelton, the third pick in the 2001 draft, said. "I really don't think about it anymore."

Brazelton went 1-6 with a 6.89 ERA in 10 starts before the Devil Rays pulled the plug on his rookie season last June. He spent the rest of the year in Bakersfield, where he worked on his mechanics and tried to regain his confidence. Unable to make the starting rotation in spring training, he began this season at Triple-A Durham, where he enjoyed modersix days after failing to make it through the three innings against Arizona despite being staked to a 7-0 lead, Brazelton bounced back with the best performance of his career.

"Tve been through a lot. But everybody in here has been through a lot," the 24-year-old right-hander said.

The victory was the 14th in 15 games for Tampa Bay, which improved to a major league-best 25-7 since May 20 and — at 35-35 overall — joined the 1899 Louisville

The Devil Rays also are a major league-best 12-1 in interleague play, a startling turnaround from 2003 when they went 3-15 against NL opponents for the most losses by one team in a season.

Brazelton walked six, struck out five and hit a batter. Danys Baez got four outs for his 14th save in 16 opportunities, allowing a single to Hee Seop Choi in the ninth before finishing the combined two-hitter.

Rangers 3, Astros 1: Kenny Rogers threw a three-hitter and the host Rangers spoiled Carlos Beltran's Houston debut, beating the Astros for their seventh straight victory. Rogers (10-2) retired 13 straight before Beltran hit a leadoff double in the seventh.

Tigers 2, Diamondbacks 1: Jason Johnson (5-7) allowed one hit in eight innings and the host Tigers sent Arizona to its season-high seventh straight loss. Orioles 5, Braves 0: Rookie Daniel Caielanek hit his first homer, a three-run shot, and drove in his first runs of the season as the visiting Cubs beat the White Sox. Blue Jays 3, Expos 1: Josh Towers (2-2) allowed six hits and a run in seven-plus innings and Reed Johnson had two RBIs for the host Blue Jays.

Red Sox 12, Phillies 1 (8): Manny

Pedro Martinez (8-3) allowed one run — Jim Thome's major league-leading 25th homer — on two hits in seven innings. Cardinals 5, Royals 2: Scott Rolen had a homer and three-run double and Matt Morris (8-6) pitched eight innings for St. Louis.

Twins 6, Brewers 3: Johan Santana (6-4) struck out 10 to win his fourth straight start and Cristian Guzman homered and scored four runs in homestanding Minnesota's third consecutive victory.

Padres 3, Mariners 2: Brian Lawrence (9-5) earned his ninth win, Phil Nevin hit a two-rum single and visiting San Diego held off Seattle when pinch-runner Hiram Bocachica was caught making a wide turn off third for the final out.

Angels 13, Dodgers 0: Darin Erstad hit his first homer and drove in four runs, Jarrod Washburn and Derrick Turnbow combined on a four-hitter as the visiting Angels handed Los Angeles its fifth straight loss.

Reds 6, Pirates 4: Pinch-hitter Wily Mo Pena capped a six-run seventh with a grand slam, lifting the host Reds.

Schmidt bests Zito in battle of West Coast aces

BY JANIE MCCAULEY

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jason Schmidt admitted to overthrowing his pitches and being lazy, which would be somewhat understandable considering he already had a five-run lead when he took the mound.

Still, Schmidt pitched into the ninth inning to win his career-best 10th consecutive decision, leading the San Francisco Giants to their seventh straight victory, 6-4 over the Oakland Athletics on Friday night.

Schmidt (10-2), coming off a one-hit gem against Boston last Sunday, didn't look as sharp this outing. He hasn't lost since dropping his first two starts of the season and is tied for the major league lead in victories. His 10 straight are the most by a Giants pitcher since Vida Blue won 10 in a row in 1978.

He allowed four runs and five hits, struck out four and walked three in 8¹/₃ innings before a sellout crowd of 48,189.

"It wasn't really a struggle," Schmidt said. "When you get a big lead like that, you don't want to say you have it in the bag, but you get on cruise control. You make pitches you usually wouldn't make."

Scott Eyre came in after Schmidt and allowed Scott Hatteberg's two-run homer in the ninth and a double to Erubiel Durazo.
The Giants then brought in Matt
Herges, who gave up a single to Bobby Crosby before getting Damian Miller to ground into a game-ending double play for his 20th save.

The Giants have won 11 of 12 overall to regain the lead in the NL West.

Schmidt was staked to an early lead on back-to-back homers beivi Cruz and Pedro Feliz in the first. Cruz hit a three-run homer and Feliz followed with a solo shot. All five Giants runs were unearned after a fielding mistake by the A's.

Oakland missed a potential double play when starter Barry Zito (4-5) threw to second baseman Marco Scutaro trying to get Ray Durham on a slow roller by Marquis Grissom. Scutaro was standing several feet behind the bag, apparently thinking Crosby, the shortstop, would make the play. Crosby was charged with an

"I thought it was going to get by him (Zito), so I took a step in and hesitated for one second and no one was there," Crosby said. "It was definitely my fault. I should have been at second."

error on the play.

Zito then walked Barry Bonds to load the bases.

Edgardo Alfonzo hit a sacrifice fly, Cruz connected on a 1-0 pitch for his first homer and Feliz then homered off the top of the scoreboard in left. his 13th of the year. Zito didn't blame Crosby for the miscommunication.

"As a pitcher, you're taught to just throw to second and assume someone's going to be on the base," Zito said. "Bobby had the bag, but for some reason wasn't there. I've got to make the adjustment and throw to first."

Zito allowed one earned run on Michael Tucker's sacrifice fly in the fifth — but Oakland's offense couldn't do much against Schmidt.

Schmidt didn't allow a baserunner past first until Miller's sixth-inning double. Crosby hit a two-run homer for the A's in the seventh, his 10th this season.

Zito hasn't won since a 10-6 victory against Cincinnati on June 8, a span of three starts. CJon

Young: Texas atop West without Rodriguez

YOUNG, FROM BACK PAGE

Young has since had a major part in the in-season response of the Rangers, who were alone at the top of the AL West in June for the first time since 1999 — when they won their last division title. They were last by this point each of the past four seasons, 21½ games back last year.

After Texas was swept last week in a three-game series at Cin-cinnati, Young sat with Showalter for part of the flight to Florida.

"He came up and talked for a while. It picked me up," Show-alter said. "Talking to him and alter said. "Talking to him and watching him play picks me up if I'm down."

Pessimists waiting for the Rangers to collapse thought that was the beginning of the fall. Texas instead won a season-best six games in a row, sweeping the World Series champion Florida Marlins and Seattle.

"There's a great chemistry on this club and that's probably the driving force," said Young, the only Ranger to start every game.

"Winning is addictive. Once you start winning, that's all I care about." A minor league shortstop, Young was moved to second when the Rangers got Rodriguez. He started 102 games as a rookie in 2001, and in 21/2 years became one of the AL's top second basemen. Last season, his .987 fielding percentage (10 errors in 786 chances) was third among AL second basemen and his .306 batting average was the best. He led the Rangers with 204 hits.

After consecutive throwing errors in this season's home opener at shortstop, Young went 27 games (132 chances) without an

While he's already got more errors (11) than last season, his of-fensive numbers have improved for the fourth straight year.

"He's been pretty impressive. The guy's all about winning. He's their ignitor and the key to get-ting their offense going," Mari-ners manager Bob Melvin said. "I've always been impressed by the way he goes about his busi-ness. He's a guy deserving of an All-Star selection.

With just a few days left in fan balloting for the All-Star Game, New York's Derek Jeter led AL shortstops. Boston's Nomar Garciaparra, despite missing the first 2½ months injured, was second ahead of Young.

Young will have to be voted in by his peers or selected by AL manager Joe Torre of the New York Yankees. But missing the All-Star Game may be the only way to get him a break. Even when the Rangers play 14 road games in 14 days before the All-Star Game, Young doesn't plan to take time off.

"Mentally, I'm prepared to do it. I came into the season ready to play every game," he said. "It's something that I take pride in. I want to be the type of player that my teammates can really lean

No A-Rod? No problem

Young making sure Rangers don't have shortfall at shortstop

ARLINGTON, Texas he bucket of fan mail in the Texas shortstop's locker overflows with baseball cards and other memorabilia awaiting his signature.

No, it's not leftovers from Alex Rodriguez.

Michael Young has replaced the departed AL MVP as the fan favorite in Texas. More importantly for the surprising Rangers, he has made sure A-Rod hasn't been missed on the field.

Young switched to shortstop and is still one of the league's top hitters. He's also taken on an expanded leadership role for a team that isn't on the bottom in the AL West anymore.

"He's really grown as a team leader," first baseman Mark Teixeira said. "He speaks out when he has to. But the best leader is someone who leads by example. The best example he sets is when he's on the field."

Through the first 69 games, Young played all but four innings and was hitting .331 (fifth in the AL) with a league-best 34 multihit games from the leadoff spot. He had 10 homers and 45 RBIs, one more than Rodriguez had batting third in the New York Yankees' lineup. A-Rod hit .292 with 18 homers his first 69 games.

"He's having the same kind of year he had last year. He played Gold Glove second base and his production keeps going up," said Rodriguez, who doesn't believe his departure is the reason for the attention on Young. "It's the fact that they're winning," he said. "That brings more focus and attention to what you're doing."

Young refuses to call himself A-Rod's replacement. They were

"I go out and try and play hard and do the things I know I can do well," Young said. "That's an added benefit of playing on a good team. I'm not really focused on what I'm doing."

When Rodriguez got his wish to be traded just two weeks before spring training, plenty of questions were raised for the Rangers:

Who would play shortstop?

What to do with two

■ What to do with two top-notch second basemen? Young had established himself as one of the league's best playing beside Rodriguez, and Texas got two-time All-Star Alfonso Soriano from New York in the deal.

■ How would the Rangers respond after losing one of the game's best players, the one just tabbed the second captain in franchise history?

A day before the first full-squad workout at spring training, Young answered the first two questions. He went unsolicited into manager Buck Showalter's office and said he'd play shortstop. "That avoided a hig stink for ev-

"That avoided a big stink for everybody. By doing so, he took a load off of a lot of people, but put a load on his back," outfielder Rusty Greer said. "I think his shoulders are wide enough to carry that load."
